The Fred Bates To Observe Golden Wedding Sunday

There will be Open House in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Bates on their Golden Wedding anniversary at the Estacada Log Cabin on Sunday, March 30 from 2 until 5 P.M.

School Matters to be Discussed

There will be a meeting at the Estacada City Hall, Friday, March 28, at 8:00 P.M. and all citizens are urged to attend. The candidates for election to the high school board will be present to be introduced and a discussion of present school operations with questions and answers will be conducted with the aid of a moderator.

Rumors and criticisms of the high school board's administration policies have been circulating. It is felt that a public meeting should be held so public discussion under a moderator can be conducted on the questions and to make wishes known as to any future action to be taken.

ELECTIONS COMING
In addition to our local school elections in which there will be considerable interest shown, the primary elections will be in May. All people who have changed their places of residence or have not registered are urged to do so. Howard Smith is accepting registrations at his office.

The hospitality was handled by Mrs. Bill Jones and Mrs. Jack Blake being assisted by Miss Kazuka Inuzako and a selected committee.

Students representing the high school handled the program which was very colorful and entertaining.

The parents who attended were also reminded of the big annual P.T.A. Kickaroo tomorrow evening to be held in the grade school cafeteria and basement. This is a community affair and the public cooperation is needed to make it a big success.

N. F. Dam Worker Fatally Injured

A 53-year old worker on the Portland General Electric company North Fork dam construction project here died in surgery at Providence Hospital on Tuesday afternoon from multiple injuries suffered when he was nearly buried in a rock slide at the construction site.

The victim, Tony Bargas of Portland, was injured as about 15 yards of flaky rock slid down on him from a bank above where he was working at the north end of the 207-foot high dam.

The death of Bargas was the second fatality, both on the North Fork project, in 3,000,000 man hours worked in PGE's current hydroelectric expansion program, the company said. The first was when George Berkholtz, 40, Oregon City carpenter, was injured fatally in December when he fell some 120 feet from the top of the partially completed arch dam.

FUTURISTIC ROADS TAKE SHAPE

Here's how a typical portion of the Federal-Aid Highway System will look as it takes shape. 1) Interstate-Defense Highway with wide lanes and no stoplights, sharp curves or intersections; 2) State Highway, modernized and reconditioned; 3) Access road onto Interstate Highway from crossroad, eliminating intersections; 4) Former main route, to be used mainly by local traffic; 5) Relief route for city; 6) Farm-to-market road, straightened, modernized and surfaced. Now being built across the country, the new system will save thousands of lives yearly and will be finished by 1973.

ACTION PACKED FILMS AT THE BROADWAY

Now playing at the Broadway Theatre, an action packed story of the U. S. Navy Research crews in action with the "The SHARKFIGHTERS" Victor Mature is cast in the leading role as the Lt. Commander in charge of operations. Purpose is to find a repellent which will readily dissolve around the body of a man in water in order to keep sharks away. Filmed off the coast of Cuba and using real live sharks makes this picture doubly intriguing. Mature and other members of the cast actually swam in the shark infested waters many times and at times were in actual combat with them. Excitement from beginning to end. Second feature: A great western "The Halliday Brand" with Joseph Cotten, Viveca Lindfors, Betsy Blair and Ward Bond. A western family divided against itself with a domineering father who drives one son to the life of an outlaw and a daughter and younger brother to an abnormal way of life. When both son and daughter fall in love with half-breed Indians the father swears that the Halliday blood will never be mixed with red-skin blood and then the violence starts.

Child Guidance Clinic Active

In Juvenile Court for stealing $90! This was Jack, 15, six foot two, well-thought of by neighbors, friends, teachers. His grades above average and a good athlete.

In Court for stealing! For incorrigibility! "Very fortunately, the court felt the Child Guidance Clinic could help to straighten this boy out," explained Mrs. Forrest Erickson, Estacada, board member of the Clackamas County Clinic. "The results demonstrate the tremendous value of clinic work. Here was a highly intelligent, energetic boy going wrong. Unchecked, he could cost our county immense sums in loss of life and property, in treatment and care. And think of society's loss from this wasted ability and drive."

Jack's mother was a teacher, his father a night watchman. His older brother was completing his first year in the Marine. Only this past year had his teachers detected his chip-on-the-shoulder attitude; his stubbornness; his head strong tendency; his frequent and casual skipping of class.

Jack's mother explained that since his brother's induction, Jack had been getting out of hand. He'd stay out half the night, refuse to tell where he had been, what he had been doing. The parents talked to him, locked him out, took away his allowance. Jack became worse. For the past two months the parents seldom knew where Jack was; he was just doing as he pleased.

One night he took $90 from his mother's school—to go to Seattle to find a job on a trawler steamer to take him around the world.

Jack's parents were stunned by his sudden delinquency. The clinic traced the causes back through the years. Jack has always been more headstrong than his brother. He had always wanted to make his own decisions, even before he was old enough to do so. His parents could control him only with physical punishment. Yet Jack was a joy to them most of the time. He had a bright, sunny disposition. Nothing kept him down for long. He seemed more able than his older brother. His parents had never questioned his honesty. Until this tragedy they and everyone had always thought of him as a boy with a good character.

The psychological and psychiatric evaluation of Jack agreed with the parents. He was more than bright, had normally good personality, strength and character for his age. The diagnosis as that of adolescent rebellion growing out of the restraint commencing in childhood that failed to take into account the superior intelligence and physical drive of the boy. The actual rebellion was triggered but not caused by the departure of the older brother who had been accepted as an adult by his parents. Jack had felt that he should step into his brother's place and at the same time felt that he had to break away from his mother's control if he was to be the man his brother was.

Over a period of months Jack's mother and father, convinced that they would lose him otherwise, gave him more and more freedom to make his own decisions. Jack had replaced money he had stolen.

After a flurry of self assertion, Jack settled down and at the end of the school year was about the same boy that he had been. He was even keeping the hours his parents had set for him. The only difference was that he had taken the responsibility for his own behavior.

Hatchery Releases 450,000 Salmon

A release of 450,000 six-inch silver salmon fingerlings from the Eagle Creek fish cultural station 11 miles east of Estacada was made March 18 and 19, Leo L. Laythe, regional director, U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service has announced. The event marks the first major release of fish from the recently completed hatchery.

The project, carried out by the Bureau of Commercial Fisheries and Bureau of Sport Fisheries and Wildlife, is part of a program to develop silver salmon runs in lower Columbia river streams to help compensate for losses at upstream dams. The fingerlings, spawned from eggs produced at the Cedar Creek hatchery of the Oregon Fish Commission in 1956, are scheduled to return from the ocean to Eagle Creek in 1959, completing the three-year egg-to-egg cycle. The average weight on return to the hunting grounds will be about six lbs. "While it will be two years before these fish return to their point of release, the run will make an important contribution during its return from the ocean, to offshore and Columbia river sport and commercial fishing as well as sport fishing in the Willamette, Clackamas and Eagle Creek," said Laythe. Fyke nets will be used at the mouth of Eagle Creek to determine the rate of migration downstream, Laythe said. A count on return runs will be possible through use of the fish counting installation now being completed at the ladder over the lower falls in Eagle Creek. Total weight of the fingerlings being released is about 23,000 pounds.

The new hatchery at Eagle Creek, completed in 1956, was built under the Columbia river fishery development program of the Bureau of Commercial Fisheries and is operated by the Bureau of Sport Fisheries and Wildlife.
