

Eagle Creek

(By Margaret Ross)
Last Sunday's rain dampened the picnic jaunt of the Earl Brackets, the Shirley Burnetts and the Carl Ronnows. Upon arrival at Champoeg state park they promptly decided to return home and adjourn to the Brackets' house for lunch.
Among those attending the Portland celebration last Wednesday night (June 25) of the newly united Presbyterian church in the U.S.A. were Mr. and Mrs. Earl Brackett, Mrs. Homer Glover, Mrs. Vernon Ross, Janne Burnett, and Nancy Whisler.
Rev. Vernon Ross is at Menucha during this week serving as counsellor at a Presbyterian junior camp.

Mrs. Laurence Sones returned home last Saturday from Compton, Calif., where she had been staying for the past five weeks with her daughter, Mrs. Gloria Bowker. Accompanying her home, besides her son David, was her small grandson, Dennis Bowker.
Weekend houseguests of the Don Carlsons were Don's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Carlson, and his sister and brother-in-law, Mildred and Gaylord

Hatch, all from The Dalles. Mabel (Mrs. George) Baker recently enjoyed a nine day visit with her brother, Ted Holtorf from Denver, Colo. While here, the Bakers took him to Ocean Park, Wash., for fishing and clam-digging.
Weekend guests of the Lonnie Smiths were their daughter Loretta Sagner and her three grandchildren, from Portland.
Hazel Beers has gone to Ione to work as cook on the farm of her nephew for a few weeks.
Last Sunday afternoon Mr. & Mrs. Ernest Douglas visited in Boring with Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Hoffmeister, Mr. Douglas' nephew.
Ora Gaylord went to Klamath Falls last Sunday to resume his work with a pipeline construction job in connection with a dam project near there.

The Tony Buhlingers went to Milwaukie Tuesday evening of last week to visit the Elmer Bergs, former Eagle Creek residents. Of particular concern was the severe illness of the Berg's six-year-old son Mark, who was hospitalized for encephalitis (brain fever), following the measles.
Visiting the local scene last Thursday was Fred Ely, of Ione, who operated a store in Eagle Creek nearly 50 years ago. He visited his sister-in-law, Emma Douglas, and Lonnie Smiths. Last Saturday Paul Still was taken to Emanuel Hospital in Portland, with complications from flu and a previous ailment. On the previous day the Paul Stills entertained 18 guests from Portland at their home. During last week the Stills' daughter, Audrey Smith and her children came from Portland to stay with her parents while her husband Phil was in Denver on business.

Spending the summer with the Don Johnson family are Sharon and Irene Larsen, of Milwaukie, whose parents, Ed and Katie Larsen, are former Eagle Creek residents. On July 1, Caroline Johnson picked a ripe tomato from her field, which she regards as an early record. She hopes to have plenty to sell to her neighbors and friends soon.

will come at a time when beef and poultry supplies will be greater than in 1951 and when overseas needs may be less.
The economist also points out that the 1959 numbers are likely to be at least 10 percent over 1955 national marketings that helped force prices down to $12 a cwt. at Portland.
Recently, a pound hog on Oregon farms would pay for 10 pounds of barley. By the fall of 1959, the same pound may buy no more than 6 pounds of barley, Thomas states.
While the present hog profit boom appears on the way out, the longer-term outlook is still good for efficient Oregon producers, Thomas says. Pacific Coast states use much more pork than they produce, resulting in the highest hog prices in the country. Also, the Northwest now has a big supply of barley priced fairly competitively with feed grains in other parts of the country.

HOG PRICES TOO GOOD TO LAST, BUT FUTURE BRIGHT
Hog profits have been too good to last through the next year, but long-term prospects for Oregon producers are still promising, Oregon State college agricultural economists believe.
Highest hog prices in four years—and indications that they will continue favorable for the rest of 1958, are spurring farmers into increasing farrowings in the months ahead, says M. D. Thomas, OSC economist.
The 1958 fall pig crop is expected to be about 13 percent larger nationally than in 1957, according to a recent USDA report. Oregon's fall crop is expected to be even higher—20 percent above 1957.
Recent prices of $25 to $26 a cwt. at Portland are the highest since 1954. Thomas says this is partly because farmers sold potential breeding stock during the past winter, resulting in a smaller than expected spring pig crop in 1958.
Present confidence in the price level has producers in an expansion mood. Indications are that national supply of pigs for marketing during 1959 may equal the 100 million pigs in 1951. A danger signal for farmers, Thomas believes, is that the new peak in pork production

Cause of Bloodshed
BRAZIL—This uninhibited Indian maiden, "Urai" is reported to have caused the death of a tribal chief, Urubuenan, and four other Indians at a jungle village commanded by American missionary Robert Butler. The girl fled her village on the eve of her wedding and took refuge in Butler's village. She refused an appeal from her father to come home. Urubuenan went to the village to confer with Butler and was ambushed and slain. His tribesmen retaliated by killing four of the Indians in the missionary's village.
