NEUBERGER REVEALS RESULTS OF TIMBER STUDIES
Senator Richard L. Neuberger of Oregon announced today the publication of a special staff study on national forests timber sales by the Senate Interior and Insular Affairs Committee at his request.

The major recommendation is that a national forest plan be prepared to enable the Forest Service to supply its share of local and national timber requirements. This plan would be the base for budgets so that these goals would be met on schedule.

The Oregon Democrat said the report shows that in the Pacific Northwest over 1 billion board ft. of planned timber sales have been held up due to lack of rights of way and access roads. In addition he said the report points out that the Forest Service does not have a sufficient amount of timber in preparation for sale or under contract.

Neuberger said the staff study explains that while a large part of this problem stems from inadequate budget requests by the administration, there is also a need for an improved timber marketing set-up by the Forest Service.

The Oregon Senator said the study revealed that in the Pacific Northwest 70 percent of the National Forest Timber under contract was held by 52 firms, or about 16 percent of those firms holding Forest Service contracts.

The report also showed that the amount of timber cut by the industry has remained almost constant over the last few years while the Forest Service has sold more timber than the industry cut. The Oregon Senator said that he plans to confer with Senator James E. Murray, chairman of the State Interior and Insular Affairs Committee, and other Western Senators when he returns to Washington.

Effects Of Tear Gas

Free Enterprise Helps Us Again

The advantages of the traditional American principles of free enterprise to the American people were affirmed once again the other day with the announcement of the formation of a new concern, Corn Products Company.

The new organization was formed by the merger of two well-established and well-known corporations: Corn Products Refining Company, makers of such old favorites as Mazola salad and cooking oil, and Karo syrups; and The Best Foods, Inc., which produces such popular household items as Hellmann's and Best Foods mayonnaise and Skippy peanut butter.

Karo syrup! What a world of memories those words must bring to millions of people all over the United States! It would be interesting to know how many millions of people in this country were fed baby formulas containing that corn syrup over the half century it has been on the market. How many of us can remember reaching for the Karo bottle on a cold Winter's morning when there was a pile of steaming wheat cakes before us on the breakfast table?

Yes, each of these companies has been producing leading household items for more than half a century, longer than many of us can remember.

Now, the two have joined together, with the avowed purpose of serving their customers even better than before. And there will probably be new products, too.

The new company undoubtedly will introduce many of the products we have been familiar with for years to people in other parts of the world, places like Latin America, and Europe, and Asia, and perhaps even Africa.

Come to think of it, these products might very well turn out to be more effective ambassadors of good will for this country than many of the other things that are being sent abroad these days.

The new company is also going to continue producing the more than 400 different items that are used by industry in such widely varied areas as paper making, iron foundry work, printing inks, medicines and even on the backs of the postage stamps we use every day.

This formation of the new Corn Products Company shows us once more that the American principle of free enterprise can not only be of great benefit to Americans but also can serve to raise the standard of living throughout the world.
