Ate Game Cocks.

Knoxville, Tenn., Dec. Forty gamblers with 100 chickens left by boat Christmas Day for an isolated spot ten miles below Knoxville.

The boat got stuck before reaching its destination, so the fights were held on board. But when a three days' food supply was exhausted the men grew desperate.

No one would venture to swim through floating ice to land, and about $4,000 worth of chickens were killed to prevent starvation. No noise made could arouse the inhabitants of the nearest farmhouse, a mile away.

To-day a hunter, passing near the boat, was induced to seek assistance, and the men were rescued. They reached the city by back to-night.

Mr. Dave Hill of Junction was in our office Saturday and renewed his subscription and remarked that the past year had seemed to him as peculiarly fatal on old pioneers of Lane county among whom he named were his father H. Hill, H. C. Huston, Professor Johnson, Robert Clow, William Houston and Mr. Frisbee saying with a sigh "And these were all Democrats."
