

Facts are Stubborn Things
 And one of the most stubborn facts in sight to-day is this: To create business and to hold business, business men must advertise. It can no longer be said that people never read advertisements.

PACIFIC UNIVERSITY.

Bright Prospects—Its Conservatory of Music—School of Science.

The readers of the HATCHER do not need to be told of the merits of this institution which is the special pride of Washington county. For almost half a century it has stood for the best type of what is known as a liberal education and today it enjoys a reputation for thorough work and generous culture second to none on the entire coast. Indeed its good name is familiar among educated people not only on the Pacific coast but throughout the entire East. It has the distinction of being one of the very few western institutions whose work is accredited in Amherst college, for instance, without examination. Under these conditions it is not strange that the institution has been of late making marked progress. There is a steady increase in the number of students from year to year and their quality is of a high order. But what is even more encouraging than this is the growing sentiment in favor of complete courses. A much larger percentage than ever before are entering the courses leading to degrees with the full purpose of continuing to the end. The Academy class which will finish this spring the courses preparatory to entering college numbers twenty-five.

The most tangible sign of advancement, in the way of equipment appears in the Marsh Memorial Hall which will be ready for the commencement exercises at the coming anniversary. The school has completely outgrown the old recitation halls which have served their purpose for the last forty years. The accompanying cut of the new Hall gives D. L. Edwards had charge of the work until 1891, assuming full financial responsibility. Under her instruction much interest in the study of music was developed. In the fall of 1891 Miss Bertha Hadley was called to the position of director of the Conservatory at a liberal salary and the institution assumed the financial responsibility for the work. Three new pianos were added, a Webber Grand, a Steinway Grand and a Hallett & Davis upright. Miss Hadley was thoroughly qualified for the position, having taken the course at the Oberlin Conservatory and two years special training in Berlin, Germany, under one of the most famous masters of that musical city. On her resignation at the end of two years of successful work, Miss Clara W. Cooley, the present director of the Conservatory, accepted a call to that position. Miss Cooley came with the highest commendations from some of the leading musicians of America. She received her preparatory training in music at the New England Conservatory, Boston, and then spent five years in the Smith College School of Music of Northampton, Mass. Her broad and thorough knowledge of the history and science of music, together with her ability as a pianist, eminently fit her for the position she holds. The vocal music is under the charge of Mrs. Harriet D. McClelland, under whose instruction this side of the work is meeting very encouraging progress. Mrs. McClelland has had large experience as a teacher. After several years of musical study in Boston under some of the best a fair representation of the general outlines of the building but a very imperfect idea of the massive beauty of the structure. The material of its construction is brick and a bluish sandstone from a neighboring quarry. The building is three stories in height above the basement and its dimensions 143 by 70 feet. The first floor is devoted to recitation rooms, the President's office and a reception room. The commodious assembly room is on the second floor and extends up through the third story terminating in an open ceiling which consists of a series of arches, giving to the whole a very fine effect. This room occupies the center of the building and has, together with the gallery which runs across its east end and the other rooms which may be thrown into connection with it, a seating capacity of 1000. The second floor also contains the library, a large reading room and rooms for the History, English Literature and Latin classes. On the third floor the entire north end of the building is occupied by an art room while the south end furnishes two elegant rooms for the use of the literary societies. The building will be heated throughout by hot water and lighted by electricity. Altogether it is believed, that for beauty and the completeness of its appointments Marsh Hall takes rank with the best college buildings in America.

teachers of that city she had charge of the music, instrumental and vocal, at Denmark Academy, Denmark, Iowa. She also taught for three years the vocal music in the Western Female Seminary, Oxford, Ohio, and later assisted in the Conservatory at Tabor, Iowa.
AIMS AND METHODS.
 This department has for its object the logical and symmetrical development of the musical faculties, and it must necessarily therefore be educational in its method and results. Merely musical technique, then, is not the whole of the matter. Indeed for some individuals it is only incidental. The recognition of these facts, and that all who are musicians do not perform and vice versa, has brought to light the importance of the study of music as a part of a finished education and more than this. Musicians of the higher order must needs be fully and symmetrically developed mentally, else their presence as members of a society of which much is demanded is poorly justified.
 In this institution therefore, much attention is given to coordinate studies. These include Harmony and Theory, including Counterpoint, Analysis and the History of music.
 By means of these studies the student learns to understand the underlying principles of composition, modulation and accompaniment, and to use them to his own account. In studying the History of music, the development of the musical idea in the human mind and its expression by means of instrument and song is followed out.

Besides those who make music a special study, there are others who desire to become musicians who could not for one reason or another become performers. For such a course has been arranged in which music is made an elective study and is accepted as an equivalent for a certain amount of elective work in the literary courses.

In common with all first class schools of music there is required of each student seeking a diploma a certain definite amount of literary work in other departments in addition to their work in music. Here is one of the great advantages of having a conservatory in connection with a literary institution. In the study of the piano much attention is paid to technique and touch, upon proficiency in which depends one's ability to properly interpret and express the composers thought.
 In order to bring the music students into touch with one another and with the rest of the students, public recitals are given monthly, and private weekly recitals are held for the benefit of the music students in particular. In these care is taken in the interpretation of the authors studied both in instrument and song.

The following is the program of the last recital given by some of the pupils of the Conservatory, Monday p. m. in the Assembly Hall. It was public and the room was filled with an interested and appreciative audience.
 Roguishness . . . Lange
 Eleanor Russell.
 The Song of Blanche Alpen . . . Glover
 Gertrude Marsh.
 Caprice Espagnol . . . Schmolli
 Impatience . . . Curschmann
 Rose Powell.
 Sans Souci . . . Klein
 Julius Young.
 The Kuag . . . Hawley
 Mrs. Lloyd.
 Waltz . . . Schmolli
 Edith Ransom.
 Forest Worship . . . Abt
 Grace Streeter
 Hedge Roses . . . Spindler
 Anna Roe.
 Entrance to the Forest . . . Schumann
 Mrs. Atwell.

One of the advantages of studying in a Conservatory of Music is the incentive that is given to students by their daily contact with each other and the frequent opportunity to perform before other members of the class. This is done in the private recitals which are held, in which every pupil takes part whether he is a beginner or advanced. Every pupil is also expected to take part in a public recital at least once each term. Besides the Pupils' Recitals, others are given in which the teacher plays the whole program, interspersing it with instructions concerning form, phraseology, etc., and calling upon the pupils to detect themes, motifs, etc.

One of the features of the Vocal Department this year has been the talks on song forms in which have been taken up and illustrated the first three of the six distinct types into which song forms may be divided. One Recital was given to the Simple Ballad and the Recitative. Another defined and analyzed the Aria and Scena with the following selections as illustrations.
 Oh, Had I Jubal's Lyre . . . Handel
 Miss Stewart.
 Oh, Rest in the Lord . . . Mendelssohn
 Miss Jones.
 With Verdure Clad . . . Haydn
 Miss Stewart.
 Let the Bright Seraphim . . . Handel
 Miss Stewart.
 When You're Absent . . . Mozart
 Mrs. McClelland.
 Dove Song . . . Mozart
 Miss Stewart.

While these are selections from masterpieces of great composers and were written for exceptional voices of world wide fame, that fact should not deter us from studying them and becoming acquainted with their beauty.
 The next talk on song forms will be on the German Thoroughly Composed Song.
 The audiences at the various recitals given throughout the year have been limited only by the capacity of the assembly room. Hereafter the auditorium of Marsh Hall will be used for this purpose and there will be room for all who may be interested to come. From time to time recitals will be given by artists from abroad.

THE SCHOOL OF SCIENCE.
 The courses in Science are as follows: In Chemistry and Physics and in Natural History. These courses form a continuous and logical series extending throughout nearly three years, beginning with the Sophomore year, in which the course in Biology, Botany and General Chemistry are required. In this way the student gets a clear conception of the principles involved, and can intelligently choose his later course. The choice of electives which are offered both in Chemistry and Biology, will be determined by natural inclination and future work. For instance, if a student is looking towards the medical profession, he can by electing Biology thoroughly prepare himself for the study of medicine and do a greater part of the work of the first year in medical school. The Biological Laboratory is well supplied with specimens for the study of comparative osteology, histology and embryology. The Chemical Laboratory is thoroughly equipped with all the apparatus necessary for courses in General Chemistry, Qualitative and Quantitative Analysis and Organic Chemistry. Professor Whittlesley, who has been studying in Germany, will return next September to take up this work in Chemistry. The building heretofore known as the College Building will be used hereafter for a Biological and Chemical Laboratory, and to this end it will be remodeled and fitted up. The collections can then be displayed to better advantage and therefore be more useful.

Young Men's State Republican Club.
 The meeting of the state club in Portland May 22 promises to be the largest gathering of republicans ever assembled in Oregon in a representative capacity. At this meeting delegates to the National Republican League meeting at Cleveland, June 19th, will be elected, and steps will be taken to put the club organization in this state in better shape for effective work. Arrangements have been made with the Southern Pacific for a round trip rate of one and one-third fare. A full rate ticket will be purchased to Portland and a certificate secured from the agent with the ticket. This certificate will be countersigned by the secretary at the convention and then will entitle the holder to purchase a return ticket the day after the convention at one-third fare on the Southern Pacific. The secretary will countersign tickets for visitors as well as delegates, so that all may have the benefit of the rate.
Accident at the Dormitory.
 Saturday afternoon some of the boys at the Dormitory were engaged in transferring the roof of an old building to the frame of a woodshed. A large section had been cut off, moved to its position and stayed there and another piece was being put up when the bracing came down before the boys could get out of its way. Mr. Bursell was stunned but soon recovered consciousness and is all right again. Mr. Shlach received several severe bruises and three or four cuts on the face and side of his head but no serious injury and was able to be about the same evening after his wounds had been dressed. The third of the party did not escape so lightly but broke both bones of his right leg. The limb was set Monday after the swelling had gone down so as to admit of it and the patient is progressing finely. Bad as the accident was it was a narrow escape from one much more serious.

Stolen Goods Found.
 Monday Deputy Sheriff John McNamer and Mr. Matlock brought in more of the goods stolen from Briggs & Co's store at Dilley sometime ago. They were found each in out of the way places in the woods back of the old Lousignout place. 16 pairs of shoes, 20 lbs. of tobacco, and a number of pairs of shears were part of the find which with previous captures practically accounts for all the missing goods.

Sunday School Delegates.
 Delegates to the Sunday school convention at Portland from the Christian Sunday School were Miss Nellie Woods, Mrs. Belle Walker and John Best; from the Methodist; Mr. W. W. Breedren, Miss Flower, Miss Laura Hoyt and Mr. John Strait.
