Campers have been cutting the telegraph lines between this place and Forest Grove, and the principal trouble regarding the line being down comes from this. Geo. Bacon, the stage driver, has found parts of the line gone in several places, and in a few cases poles were chopped down to get pieces of the line. At the camps pieces of the wire have been found used as clothes lines, and frequently parties come through this place with pieces of the wire wrapped around breaks on their wagons. A close watch will be made and any one found molesting the wire will be prosecuted to the full extent of the law, and somebody is likely to pay a heavy fine or lay in jail a while.—Tillamook Headlight.

Mr. Atchison dropped his wife and child out safely but as after 250 yards he found himself unable to control the animal he jumped and rolled about 20 feet, but was unhurt. Mr. Atchison was holding a pail of buttermilk and it was lost. No damage resulted except bruises for the horse and a broken rig. Mr. Atchison regrets the loss of his buttermilk though.

A Wonderful Escape.

Friday Andy Kioox's team while the wagon was being loaded with rock at the stone quarry and the driver J. B. Matthews, was standing at their heads, slipped at a buggy which was passing and one animal went over the bank. The bank broke and driver, horses and wagon rolled down the canyon nearly 300 feet. In spite of their terrible fall all escaped safely and the only damage was to the harness and that was slight. A load of about 4500 was on and made the descent. It might easily have been a most serious mishap.
