Considerable amusement has been afforded by the antics of electricity at the corner of Boos & H. store building near the post-office. The current has gotten into the roof and rain pipe there and it has been a pastime for the knowing ones to stand on a plank by the sidewalk while their victim was on the ground, and electrify him by forming a circuit with the roof. Of course they were on a non-conductor and were unaffected until they connected the circuit by touching some one who was apt to be rather astonished and jump about excitedly. Quite a number have passed through the experience this week.
