MARSH MEMORIAL HALL.

The New Building Formally Dedicated.

Friday was a notable day in Forest Grove. The students were all up early and down at the station long before the Portland train came in. When it did it brought a coachload of visitors who were taken into waiting carriages and driven to the Hall. Many preferred to enjoy the beautiful day which showed the Grove at its best and walked up behind the procession of students.

The handsome new auditorium was speedily filled and soon the time came for the exercises to begin. Dr. McClelland presided. After the invocation Mayor Hughes addressed the visitors in the clear cut straightforward welcome which appears below.

"Mr. President, Ladies and Gentlemen: It is a source of great personal gratification to have the honor, on behalf of the people of Forest Grove and the faculty and trustees of Tualatin academy and Pacific university, of extending to all visitors a hearty welcome to Forest Grove on the present occasion.

"The construction of Marsh memorial hall, under existing circumstances and conditions, is a matter worthy of special note and congratulation. It is a well-known fact that the country is passing through one of the greatest financial depressions known in the history of the entire nation, affecting adversely every section, industry and interest of the entire country. The completion of an improvement of this kind, under the circumstances, evidences the pluck, energy and perseverance of those having the work in hand, and may be regarded as an index to subsequent actions on the part of those entrusted with the great work of which this is simply a beginning.

"It is entirely unnecessary, on my part to say anything in reference to the past history of the institution or its work. This is well known through its alumni and students, who are located throughout the great Northwest, and occupy high and honorable positions in every department of life, and furnish ample evidence of the thorough character of the work of the institution in all its various departments.

"The dedication of this building marks an epoch in the history of Forest Grove whose interests are identical with and inseparable from those of the institution. And while the board of trustees and faculty have pushed their work with such marked energy and success, the people in the city have not been idle spectators but have been advancing on a steady and progressive step, unaffected by the influence of any boom or undue excitement whatever. The improvements within the last two years have been marked, and are subjects of many congratulations. Quite a number of fine residence buildings have been erected. Some very creditable business blocks have been added to the business portion of the city. The public streets have been greatly improved and new sidewalks placed in position. We have in operation an electric-light plant second to none in the state, with sufficient capacity to meet all the requirements of the city for a number of years. Also a local telephone system, connecting many residences, and these with nearly every business house in the city, also connection with the town of Greenville on the north and Gales City, Wilson River, Tillamook and Bay City on the west.

"We have also determined, by vote of the people, on the construction of a water plant of sufficient capacity to supply the city with good and wholesome water for both public and private use, and for better protection against fire.

"When all the contemplated improvements are complete, and our population augmented by that class of people who always cluster around institutions of learning, we hope to be able to boast of one of the most beautiful, healthy and desirable residence cities in the Northwest.

"And now, thanking you for the honor of your presence, I again extend to you the freedom of our city."

The response by Hon. Harvey W. Scott, editor in chief of the Oregonian, the first alumnus of P. U., strongly urged the necessity of supporting and upbuilding the home college as necessary to creating an atmosphere of culture at home and because the education that will best fit us for duties among the people with whom we must live and work is not to be had far from home.

Hon. Thos. H. Tongue of the class of '68 followed Mr. Scott and followed out the tendencies of present college life, and discussed how to escape them, believing the salvation to be in teaching men more how to work than how to escape from it.

At the conclusion of Mr. Tongue's address Mr. Scott, president of the alumni association, assumed control of the program and called on a number of the visiting alumni for short speeches. Trustee who spoke of the peculiar fitness of Mayor Hughes, Dr. Marsh's great friend and a zealous helper of the university, presiding, and Trustee Napoleon Davis '83, who stated that the total cost of the building as it now stands was $41,987.69, of which $10,000 had been raised in Forest Grove, a fact denoting the loyalty to the school of its people. This sum, with $26,000 of endowment funds which have been secured, indicate that the college is $68,000 better off than it was two years ago. Referring to the Pearson fund, Mr. Davis said that fully half of the sum required to secure it had been raised, and that President McClelland would soon go East and labor until the amount required was raised. Musical selections by students had been interspersed with the speeches. T. A. & P. U., sung by the students, ended the exercises of the morning.

N. J. McCoy, '83, J. T. Whalley, '81,

After viewing the interior arrangement of the new building the visitors, alumni and others, on an invitation from Dr. McClelland so broad that all might come, visited the old college chapel where the ladies of Forest Grove had spread an inviting lunch in beautiful profusion, ample for twice the number of diners.

At half past two the auditorium was again filled and the formal dedication began. Dr. McClelland presided. After prayer and Scripture reading by Rev. Dr. George R. Wallace of Portland, President J. K. McLean, D. D., of Pacific Theological seminary, Oakland, Cal., was introduced, delivered the dedicatory address, on "The Problem of the Twentieth-Century Christian College." A leading idea was that the state universities had come to stay, that to have them was our Western way and that the sooner the sectarian colleges recognized it and ceased to strive at unattainable university methods and confined themselves to strictly college work the closer they would be to accomplishing the best they were able. The dedicatory prayer was offered by Rev. Dr. J. W. Cowan of Oregon City and the audience dismissed with the benediction by Supt. C. F. Clapp of the Oregon Home Missionary society. Some of the visitors had to leave on the evening train but in numbers they could not have been missed when the evening exercises began in Marsh Hall. The evening address was by Dr. C. H. Chapman, president of the State University, Eugene, and was masterly.

The last exercise of the day was a pleasant reception given by Dr. and Mrs. McClelland at Ladies' hall. Visitors, leading townspeople and students generally availed themselves of the opportunity to become acquainted, and many a time it was said what a day for Pacific University it had been.

An Ideal College Town.
The dedication of Marsh memorial hall at Forest Grove last Friday was an event of importance in the history of the well known college at that place. The college is now provided with ample and excellent buildings for its work. It is conducted in the true spirit of a sound educational institution, and may be alike proud of its past and hopeful of its future. Large space is surrendered by the Oregonian today to publication of an account of the exercises at the dedication of Marsh memorial hall. The building is a creditable one both in utility and appearance. Forest Grove, year by year, assumes more the character of an ideal college town.—The Oregonian.

Council Talks Bonds.
The city council held a special meeting Monday evening to talk over bonds. Absentees were Councilmen Sappington and Walker, and the recorder whose place was filled by Dr. Large. Mr. Crowthers, a Portland bond buyer, was present and gave considerable information as to the present state of the bond market and what helped and what hindered floating an issue.

Some mischievous person found that the door key had been left outside in the lock and turned it. When the marshal got ready to go home he found the door secured and had to climb out of the window. He then released the others, for many of them the first experience in being locked up in jail.

Arrested for Stealing.
Last Saturday Constable Annans accompanied by a constable from North Yamhill, went out to the Laurel neighborhood and brought in a young fellow about twenty years of age by the name of Moore who is charged with petty larceny in Yamhill county. The officer also took back with him, in company with Moore, Ed. Reaman, on the same charge. Another officer captured two of the same party, who were bound for the Tillamook county. The quartette have been picking hops up in the Yamhill yards, and the officers say they have a sure case against them. As all are young men who have hitherto borne good reputations it is to be hoped they will prove themselves innocent of the charges preferred against them.

PRESIDENTIAL POSSIBILITIES.

Men from whom Cleveland's Successor will be Chosen.

Three republicans—McKinley, Allison and Morton—have now been placed by their states upon the presidential track. These three will be presented in the convention, and two of them at least—McKinley and Allison—are considered by their state and by a large element of the party in the rest of the country to be really and emphatically in the race for candidacy. Maine and Indiana will not have any chance this year to make a formal declaration of preference, but each, of course, will support the claims of its own favorite son in the convention and each will be backed by some of the other states, Maine, at all events, will have this backing, and Indiana probably will. None of the others—Sherman, Alger, Edmunds and Lincoln—heretofore voted for in national conventions, are likely to figure with any prominence in the balloting.

Thus five men will divide the strength of the convention on the first ballot, which circumstance affords a certainty that the nomination will not be made on that ballot, and which furnishes reasonable presumption that it will not be made on the second or third either. This is as large a field of racers as have ever appeared on the presidential track in a republican national convention. Only two men, Fremont and John McLean, of Ohio, were in the race for the candidacy in 1856, and before the convention met it was easy to see that McLean's hopes were in vain. Seward, Lincoln, Cameron Chase and Bates had powerful and confident supporters in the convention of 1860. One man is all who was mentioned in the next three conventions—Lincoln in 1864 and Grant in 1868 and 1872. Five men appeared to be in the race in 1876—Blaine, Morton, Bristow, Conkling and Hayes—and in 1880—Sherman, Gresham, Alger, Harrison and Allison; three in 1888—Grant, Blaine and Sherman—and two in 1894 and 1892—Blaine and Arthur in the former year and Harrison and Blaine in the latter.

It is hard to tell how little seriousness there is in the Morton affair. Platt, it has often been said and it is generally believed, will use Morton to keep the New York vote solid and after two or three ballots, transfer it to the ones among the promising aspirants with whom he can make the best bargain in the shape of patronage. Morton's advanced age will handicap him in the race yet in a deadlock between the stronger aspirants he may nevertheless win the prize. Everybody still thinks Reed and McKinley are in the lead, Reed is tolerably sure to have the virtually solid vote of New England but nobody can readily estimate with any sort of confidence how far his strength extends beyond that locality. McKinley's extremist views on the tariff ought to get him most of Pennsylvania's delegation but of course Quay will largely dictate the course of that state. Allison, it is thought will have many supporters in the silver mining states and some of Harrison's friends look for a good many votes for him from Southern nelegates, although it is not easy to see on what this hope is based. The contest is reasonably sure to last through half a dozen ballots or more and the most careful estimates of the chances which are possible at this time are no better than guesses.—St. Louis Globe Democrat.
