JOHN H. MITCHELL.

Oregon's Senior Senator Visits Washington County.

Quite a crowd was gathered at the Grove station Monday when the morning train from Portland arrived. Among the passengers who alighted was a man of good height and robust build in a dark overcoat and a silk hat. His features were strong but kindly and his eyes, concealed somewhat by glasses, had a pleasant gleam in them. His fall beard had grey mingled with its dark brown but he was evidently a man in his full prime. It was Senator Mitchell and Rep. Yates, Mayor Hughes and others who gathered about him to welcome him to Forest Grove met with a hearty hand clasp and genial greeting that showed his reported cordiality was not exaggerated, and made those who were new acquaintances feel old friends at once.

Mr. Jones' three seated surrey took the party to Caples & Thomas stores where an impromptu levee was held on the sidewalk and a number of citizens were introduced to Mr. Mitchell. As during the rest of the day it was notable how many he called by name and generally if the name had to be suggested to him he would mention some relative with whom he was acquainted. A change was here made to Mr. Yates' two seated carriage, the silk hat and over coat exchanged for a duster and a soft hat and with the representative as driver and accompanied by the editor of the HATCHET the Senator started toward Buxton where the object of his coming was. Hon. T. H. Tongue and Editor Gault arrived just before the start, having driven over from Hillsboro, and accompanied Mr. Mitchell throughout the journey.

At half past ten Greenville was reached two American flags were flying from their staffs in honor of the visitor. Here Col. Tom Cornelius drove in and joined the company with which he remained during the trip. At Moore, Ireland & Co's store, where Mr. Mitchell spent the succeeding three quarters of an hour many from the neighborhood availed themselves of the opportunity of shaking hands with Oregon's senior senator. Introductions over Mr. Mitchell and party went to Mr. Moore's hospitable home where they were royally entertained. Here were gathered Mrs. Moore, Miss Hattie Moore, Mrs. Barrett, Mrs. Will Moore and Mrs. Parrish. After a few minutes of social conversation came dinner, and it was indeed a banquet. A pleasant feature was that there were seated at the table four who as members of the legislature had voted for Mr. Mitchell for senator, Col. Cornelius, T. H. Tongue, D. M. C. Gault and the host, Mr. Moore.

At a little after twelve the journey was resumed, going a little out of the regular route to inspect some of the farms in the Quadrant. All the rest of the way wagons loaded with people heading for Buxton were passed. On every side were thrifty orchards, well kept farms and comfortable dwellings—the homes these people had worked for only to lose as it seemed unless the senator who was come to them could assist them. Mr. Mitchell seemed favorably impressed with the country. An incident of the trip was that Mr. Tongue and Mr. Gault got lost several times, turning off on by roads and only finding out their mistake when the road ended in a squirrel track. Colonel Cornelius followed their guidance and travelled many needless miles, still they arrived at last.

At Buxton about three hundred people were assembled at the hall. After stopping at Mr. Mayford's home for a few minutes to brush the dust off, Mr. Mitchell made his way to the store platform, where Mr. Yates briefly introduced him, alluding to the fact that it was not politics that brought the senator among them but a desire to find out the condition of the settlers, that he might be of service to them as far as was in his power if there should be need of him. For this reason a set speech was out of place; that Mr. Mitchell merely desired to talk with them and question them.

Senator Mitchell said that for many years past through the kindness of the legislature he had been one of the people's servants and had known that there were in Washington and Columbia counties many people in tribulation over their homes. Referred to having himself been in all kinds of farm work and helped his father make their Pennsylvania home and he could appreciate what a work it is in a woody country. Representative Yates had urged him to come and he was there to get the facts, standing ready and willing and anxious if he could do anything for their relief to do it.

Finding out in conversation with the settlers that some of them had patents from the government and others not only patents but contracts with the railroad company on which nearly full payment had been made at the time of the declaration of forfeiture, and that the settlers had been invited to file on these lands, Mr. Mitchell said: "I can contemplate no greater outrage than for a government, professing to be a government of justice, to hold out to its citizens that lands are open to settlement, taking money for it and then after homes have been made on it to turn around and say, 'It is not ours.'"

Arnold Concert.

The concert Monday evening for the benefit of the public school was not as well attended as had been hoped but those who were there enjoyed the entertainment and were appreciative. The only regret is that instead of new books being added to the school library Principal Thomas has had to go down into his pocket to foot the bills. The Mitchell reception was too strong a counter attraction. Those who were not there but who would like to show their interest in the work will probably find any book they may care to contribute will be gratefully received. The evening's program follows:

In answer to a question if the settlers desired that the case should be advanced on the Supreme Court docket that a speedy decision might be reached, it was voted unanimously in favor of asking this of the attorney general. There are from six hundred to a thousand families in suspense and as soon as a decision is reached, if unfavorable, the Oregon delegation will be asked to do what can be done for their relief. For his information Senator Mitchell requested a statement of the number of settlers, their holdings and the extent of their improvements. As a committee to obtain these facts Messrs. Roe of Vernonia, Gleason of Buxton, Luster of Gales Creek, Berkholder of Upper Nehalem, Garrigus of the Mead neighborhood, McMillan of Hayward and Bowers of Green Mountain were appointed. This information together with whether the settler has a patent or R. R. contract, or both, will be made into a petition and forwarded to Mr. Mitchell. At Mr. Tongue's suggestion names of those who have filed but are not now on their lands, will be gotten from the Oregon City land office. Mr. Yates volunteered to perform this duty.

The return trip was made as before except that Mr. Mitchell rode with Col. Cornelius. At the Grove the Senator was taken to Mrs. Sloan's hotel for supper which was served in a style highly creditable to the house and its hostess.

A little before eight the band serenaded Mr. Mitchell and then preceded by the musicians and an escort of leading citizens he proceeded to the new college hall which the university authorities had courteously thrown open for the public reception. Five or six hundred people were soon collected there. On the rostrum were seated Senator Mitchell, Mayor Hughes, Representative Yates, Mr. E. W. Haines, Mr. Martin Manning and Austin Craig. Mayor Hughes in introducing the distinguished visitor said it was not a political trip but a visit merely on business and that they would receive him informally but most heartily they bade him welcome.

Mr. Mitchell in his reply referred to having come here twenty-five years ago to deliver a prohibition speech and there was only one reason why he was not entitled to the credit of having made Forest Grove a temperance town, that was, it was a temperance city already. He spoke of the just pride he felt in being the representative and servant of so great a state as Oregon, great in extent, great in resources, great in valleys and rivers and mountains, great in its future, a grand state. And yet a state difficult above all others to represent on account of the immensity and diversity of its interests and the numerous needs so justly asked to be satisfied. A state larger than all New England by thirty thousand square miles. He concluded his remarks by bidding all good night and asking the privilege of taking as many as wished by the hand.

About five hundred people were presented to the senator by Mayor Hughes who stood beside him and each received a cordial clasp of the hand and some word of welcome. During this time the band played outside on the campus. After the reception was over Mr. Mitchell returned to Mrs. Sloan's hotel where many who were old friends called and renewed their acquaintances. The Senator returned to Portland on Tuesday morning's train, leaving a most favorable recollection of him with those who were fortunate enough to meet him. It is to be regretted that Senator McBride was unable to come with him as had been hoped. Aside from the pleasure of meeting so prominent and justly honored a man it is a source of gratification to many to feel that the people of the Quadrant who are so unfortunately situated are not without a friend in one who has power and influence above all others to help them.
