The reason for this step, Mr. Pfanner says, is owing to his precarious health, and he feels that he must have rest-absolute rest or die. We are assured that the property will much more than pay off all indebtedness. All creditors can surely put perfect confidence in the men to whom the assignment is made. Mr. Kane, the cashier, closed the bank so that the papers could all be adinsted. Our whole community will be pained to hear of Mr. Pfanner's illness and will heartily hope for a speedy re-
