Martin-Allen.

A pretty church wedding occurred Tuesday evening at the M. E. church when Rev. Mr. Starr, in the presence of a large number of guests, united in marriage Mr. Andrew Allen and Miss Esther Martin. The church had been tastefully decorated with ivy and roses, and made a handsome appearance. At a few minutes after nine the bridal party came down the aisle while Mrs. Laura Wells played on the piano the bridal march from Lohengrin. In front of the chancel the pastor, according to the beautiful ceremony of the Methodist Episcopal church, made the two one and then their friends pressed forward and wished Mr. and Mrs. Allen all the happiness which life can afford. The bride was becomingly gowned in a costume of pale gray India silk, trimmed with silk lace. Messrs. Fred Watrous and John Miller acted as ushers. Mr. Allen is one of the younger business men of the Grove, well liked and prospering, while Mrs. Allen, though here but a few days, has won many friends in her brief residence.

The Same Old Sarsaparilla.

That's Ayer's. The same old sarsaparilla as it was made and sold 50 years ago. In the laboratory it is different. There modern appliances lend speed to skill and experience. But the sarsaparilla is the same old sarsaparilla that made the record—50 years of cures. Why don't we better it? Well, we're much in the condition of the Bishop and the raspberry: "Doubtless," he said, "God might have made a better berry. But doubtless, also, He never did." Why don't we better the sarsaparilla? We can't. We are using the same old plant that cured the Indians and the Spaniards. It has not been bettered. And since we make sarsaparilla compounded out of sarsaparilla plant, we see no way of improvement. Of course, if we were making some secret chemical compound, we might. . . . But we're not. We're making the same old sarsaparilla to cure the same old diseases. You can tell it's the same old sarsaparilla because it works the same old cures. It's the sovereign blood purifier, and —it's Ayer's.

The services in the Congregational church on next Sunday morning, August 1st, will be conducted by Rev. C. F. Clapp.
