GRANGE PRINCIPLES.

Dignity of Labor, Fair Dealing and Good Citizenship.
We have nowhere seen a better presentation of the principles and purposes of the grange than the following in the American Agriculturist by Mr. J. A. Herr:

The character of the grange membership and their faith in the Order are such as give permanence to the organization. The effect of united grange effort is seen and felt in the legislature and other benefits secured in the interest of the farmer, along all lines of work. The dairyman, the fruit grower, the stock breeder and the poultryman have all been benefited through the efforts of the grange. A greater degree of intelligence is manifested among the farmers as a result of grange meetings and their outgrowth, the farmers' institutes of today. Extortion among dealers has been checked, and a cash basis for doing business is encouraged, with beneficial results.

The grange organization stands entirely for good. The principles are dignity of labor, honest dealing, justice to all, courage, temperance, thoroughness, peaceful citizenship, charity and unspotted character. Can there be nobler principles than these? The grange encourages advanced education and seeks to elevate not only its membership, but the community in which it exists to a higher plane of culture, refinement and social standing. Social scandals are seldom found within its ranks. Its teachings are of the purest and highest character, like that of family refinement and intellectuality. If the grange comes short of this, then the principles and precepts of the Order are not faithfully observed.

The benefits of a good, active working grange are evidenced by an increased interest in the farm and home, a greater degree of social culture and enjoyment, an advance along the lines of higher education and an independence and thrift which should be the inheritance of every farmer. These facts appeal to all persons interested in agriculture, in all its varied departments, to unite with the grange and assist in advancing its objects as well as to share its benefits.

THE GRANGE AT WORK.

Petitions That Filled Barrels When the Anti-O Bill Was Up.

In the year 1890, when the oleo question was being agitated, the grange thought it about time that we as an organization began to do something to protect our interests; therefore we passed some resolutions that we would take up what is known as the Groat bill and would use the forces of organization on it to see what could be brought about. Resolutions were drawn and presented to the subordinate granges, and it was the greatest surprise the Order ever had to know that inside of six weeks from the time of the presentation of these resolutions the replies came in to the legislative office in Washington in such numbers that they actually filled barrels. Nothing from their consciences had ever caused such a revelation to the minds of the members of congress as this did, and what has been the result? The result was that we made a determined fight from that time on and won. We did it through the grange, the recognized farmers' organization. The dairymen's associations are today interested, the horticultural societies, the department of agriculture at Washington and in our own state and in almost every state are working hand in hand with the grange. It is one of the most influential organizations in the country today.—E. B. Norris, Master New York State Grange.

The Grange in Minnesota.

The subordinate granges in Minnesota are flourishing, and a healthy growth is everywhere manifest. There is some opposition manifest by people who would use the grange for their own purpose, but faithful members are working in season and out of season to block such schemes.

It is the farm that marks our progress; it is the barometer of our prosperity and commands for us our proud position that we occupy among our sister states. Farming is no longer a mere trade, but an art requiring industry and intelligent skill to make it a success. Thanks to the Order of Patrons of Husbandry, in Minnesota means are provided which will enable farmers to acquire this art and skill. Our agricultural college stands at the head of all such institutions as to quality and extent of work.—Mrs. S. G. Baird, Master Minnesota State Grange.

Illinois State Grange.

At the last session of the Illinois state grange resolutions were adopted in favor of central township schools; to give No. 2 corn its former grade in grain inspection system; for parcels post and postal savings banks; against one cent letter postage until the rural delivery is fully established; for the people to initiate and ratify important legislation; against ship subsidy; to manage state institutions under civil service rules; for highway control of motor vehicles; people to elect United States senators; for government control of monopolistic corporations; for the lighthouse and inland ship canals; for pure food and anti-shoddy laws; for reciprocal treaties to widen foreign grain markets; to enlarge powers of the interstate commerce commission.

It is well for us to consider in our fraternal relations that our happiness as well as the happiness of others depends upon our belief in the goodness of bad people a lot more than it does on our belief in the badness of good people.—George A. Fuller.

The minor advantages of membership in the grange are directly financial, but the principal advantages are social and educational.

Rowes Corner (Me.) grange is only a little over a year old, but has 250 members and property valued at $6,000.
