VISITORS' DAY AT THE FOREST GROVE CREAMERY.
About 50 visitors availed themselves of the condensery management's invitation to inspect the plant Monday forenoon, and besides several bus and carriage loads of people, a number took the exercise of a walk to the milk factory, despite the unusually tropical temperature. The process of turning good milk into canned cream, warranted to keep in any climate and worthy the Carnation Brand, which now is recognized as a guarantee of the nearest perfection ever attained in that line, was fully explained, and the sightseers marvelled at the scrupulous neatness and cleanliness everywhere in evidence.

COUNTY SCHOOL STATISTICS.
County Superintendent H. A. Ball's completed report to the state superintendent shows an increase of 169 in school population and 182 in average attendance for Washington county public schools for the year just ended. In 1902 the school population was 5673, and this year it is 5842. The average daily attendance for 1902 was 2640, and for 1903 it is 2822. During the year the average monthly salary of male teachers has been raised from $40 to $43, and for female teachers from $32 to $34. The totals published last week were from estimates made by Mr. Ball before his work was completed, and for this reason vary somewhat from the figures given.

PORTLAND MARKET, JULY 23.
Feed houses are loath to handle new hay, though it is being offered in large lots. Old crop timothy is less firm, owing to the present crop being marketed, and $23 a ton is about the top quotation. Fruit is generally active. There are not many berries being handled on the street. Raspberries are in good receipt, and are being taken under a lively call, but Logans are practically out of season. In vegetables there is but light business, except through the regular channels. Local head lettuce is offered in lots large enough for the prevailing demand and the market holds at 15 cents. Chickens are not scarce today and they are being shipped in larger numbers than three weeks ago. Ducks are improving, but old turkeys and geese are dull. Receipts of eggs are heavy enough and they will hold their own for a time. Butter remains in the same sluggish state, with creamery displaying some life. Fresh meat houses state calves are scarcer but other meats are had in liberal quantities, though the market is in no wise over stocked.

SOMETHING NEW IN CANNING
The California Fruit Canning Association cans more fruit than all the families in Washington County. Therefore, they should be good judges of the best fruit jars to use. They have thoroughly tested and adopted for their use the new patent Hermetic Vacuum, self-sealing and ringless glass jars. No rubber rings required. So easy, quick and simple a child can seal and open it. Call and examine the jars and canned fruit now on exhibition at Thomas & James'. Ask for a printed formula showing how the association uses this jar.

ELECTION OF A POPE.
Method of Voting Adopted by Conclave of Cardinals.
GREAT SECRECY IS OBSERVED.
Their Eminences Assemble Ten Days After the Pontiff is Declared Dead and Are Locked Up in Cells—No Communication Allowed With Any One From Outside World—Smoke From Chimney and Ringing of Bell Tell Fate of Ballots.
Remarkable precaution and secrecy are observed in the election of a pope. For 600 years it has been the custom of the lord chamberlain to call the conclave of the cardinals ten days after the pope's death to begin the work of choosing his successor.
The conclave takes its name from the fact that the cardinals are locked up in "conclave" in a room in the Vatican, shut off from all communication with the outside world, says the New York Herald.
On the day of the conclave all are summoned from their cells by a bell three rung and repair to the assembly chamber. From this moment until the result of the voting is announced they have no communication save with the Vatican officials. Their clothing and even their food is searched lest they should contain correspondence from friends outside. If, by the greatest exercise of leniency, a visitor is admitted he must speak to the immured cardinal through a grating of iron and in a tone loud enough to be heard by the watchers. After a night of this seclusion the conclave is formally assembled early next afternoon, and all repair to the Sistine chapel, where a desk has been provided for each cardinal. In the middle of the hall are six tables and behind these an altar.
Immediately in front of the altar is a table on which are two chalices for holding the ballots. Before proceeding further a search is made in the chapel to assure the conclave of the fact that none but those entitled to vote are present. Three inspectors of the election are then chosen by ballot. Should any cardinal be so ill that he is unable to leave his dormitory a committee is appointed to visit him and take his vote, which is brought to the conclave sealed and deposited in one of the chalices.
Each cardinal writes on a little tablet in the corner of the chapel the name of the candidate he would elect in the center of the voting ticket. This is of an oblong form. In the center are the printed words, "Eligo in Summum Pontificem Rm. Dmmeum, D. Card" (I elect sovereign pontiff my Lord Cardinal), after which the voter inscribes the name of the candidate he would elect.
At the foot of the altar the voter lifts up his hand and exhibits the ticket between his thumb and finger. He then kneels and prays for a moment, after which he takes oath that he is about to elect him whom, according to God, he thinks ought to be elected. He then puts the ticket on the paten and slips it from thence into the chalice, which he covers up again. Then he makes anew a reverence before the altar and returns to his place.
When all have voted in like manner the six tellers examine the papers and proclaim the result. If no cardinal has obtained the required number of votes, two-thirds of the number of cardinals present, the result is declared void, and the voting papers, collected together, are burned in a brazier with damp straw, the dense smoke from which issues through a particular chimney visible from outside and proclaims to the outer world that no election has taken place.
First to cast his ballot is the dean of the college, who writes the name of his candidate on a slip of paper eight inches in length and four in width, which he folds and, sealing it at both ends folds it once more in the middle and then drops it in the bowl nearest his desk. All follow in the order of their rank as members of the college.
The burning of the ballots closes the session of the day, and the conclave adjourns until the evening.
Compromise candidates have several times been taken by general agreement whenever the race between two strong cardinals became so close as to deadlock the college. Proceeding with the election by ballot, voting is continued on the lines indicated until a choice is reached, and this is made known to the people by the absence of the smoke, for, although the ballots, as in the unsuccessful instances, are also burned, the smoke is not permitted to escape. When the result is reached it is announced by the ringing of a bell. All the senior cardinals advance to the place occupied by the newly chosen pontiff and inquire if he accepts the election.
On receiving his affirmative answer he is at once saluted by the entire college. He then announces the name by which he desires to be known throughout the world as the head of the church. An interval then occurs during which the canopies are removed from the stalls of the cardinals, except that of the newly elected pope, and his holiness retires to robe himself in the pontifical vestments.
On his return the fisherman's ring is placed on his finger by the cardinal camerlingo, and the new vicar of Christ gives his first solemn benediction to the members of the sacred college from the steps of the altar. Then, taking his seat on the sedia gestatoria, the pope receives the homage of their eminences and again communicates the name which it is his pleasure to assume as pontiff.
The people then flock into St. Peter's to see the pope and receive his blessing, and a stirring scene presents itself.
