The Artistic Purpose of Wall Paper. A Very Pleasing Design.

The choosing of a wall paper has become an important matter, for people in general have learned to recognize its true artistic purpose, which is to serve as a complement and background rather than as an independent feature of decoration; hence the increasing tendency toward quiet tones of color and unassertive designs. Of course there are exceptions in plenty to the rule, when wall paper has to be relied upon to provide the entire mural decoration—as, for example, in the case of staircase and passage walls or in rooms where there are few pictures or mural ornaments of any kind.

Then there are occasions on which the wall paper must be made to contribute a certain proportion of the salient decoration so as to give balance and completeness to the scheme of a room. While taking all this into account, however, the feeling still remains that for a room one has to live in one does not wish the wall paper to be the first item to strike the eye or to assert itself insistently. Its proper value is as a note in the general harmony.

THISTLE DOWN WALL PAPER.

giving ever increasing pleasure the more completely it is felt to fulfill its vocation in this respect. A paper of much originality which answers all these considerations is the thistle down design shown. It has its main ornament based upon the growth of the thistle. The remaining surface of the paper is lightly powdered with detached floating heads of the thistle down.
