Democratic State Convention

The Democratic State Convention held at Portland yesterday was a lively affair compared with the smooth manner in which the Republican State Convention passed off. Hearst boomers tried to stamped the convention and raised a dust which darkened their ambitions and nearly smothered them. The excitement was intense for over an hour and until the vote on the Hearst resolution was taken, a man could find trouble anywhere. The vote stood 151 to 115 against instructing, so that the eight delegates to St. Louis will go uninstructed. It remains a fact however, that Hearst is strong in Oregon and no compeditor to be ignored. Poor management was ascribed as the cause of the Hearst setback, in assailing the state organization and other local leaders. The organization effected, placed R. M. Veatch of Lane, in the chair, R. B. Montague of Linn, as secretary and C. L. Reams of Jackson, as assistant secretary.

The delegates to the National Convention are as follows:

Governor George E. Chamberlain,

Multnomah.

W. F. Butcher, Baker.

C. Redfield, Morrow.

F. V. Holman, Multnomah.

James Gleason, Multnomah.

J. D. Matlock, Lane.

T. R. Sheridan, Douglas.

Samuel Garland, Linn.

The state platform endorses the Jeffersonian democracy, death to the trusts, approves the Isthmian canal, slaps the Republican administration for shielding culpable officials, encourages labor organizations, advocates a parcel-post system and the enlargement of the power of the Interstate Commerce Commission, and the establishment of a federal assay office in this state. Gov. Chamberlain was indorsed, flat salaries for state officials recommended, the "fellow-servant" doctrine extended to all hazardous pursuits, freight rates regulated, and the adoption of the primary election law.

The Sweek faction triumphed over the Perry faction by electing Alex. Sweek chairman of the State Central Committee. The state and district ticket is as follows.

Supreme Judge, Thomas O'Day, Multnomah.

Congressman from First District, Robert M. Veatch, Lane.

Dairy and Food Commissioner, S. M. Douglas.

Presidential electors, John A. Jeffrey, Marion; T. H. Crawford, Union; W. B. Diller, Columbia, and J. H. Smith, Clatsop.

For Joint Senator from Multnomah, Washington and Columbia, J. T. Milner.

Fight to the Finish

An exciting game of base ball will be played Saturday, April 23, at the base ball park in this city, between two rival fraternal orders, the Modern Woodmen of America and the Woodmen of the World.

Many people from neighboring towns will come to witness the game and the winning team will challenge any lodge team in the county for a championship game.
