The building on Main street owned by Chas. F. Miller, and long occupied by The Times, the express and telegraph offices, and the Parson's harness shop, is to be thoroughly overhauled in the near future and placed among Forest Grove's most neat and attractive business blocks. A new plate glass front, a new floor, a new roof and skylight, and a complete change made to one large, attractive room, will materially change the appearance of Main street. A fine set of fixtures are now on their way from the east and when placed in position will be highly creditable to a city of our size. It will undoubtedly be used by the owner for a drug store and will be a fine location.
