Mayor Hoge Goes Fishing

Mayor Hoge and W. R. Harris found time to go a-fishing Tuesday out on Gales Creek. From the reports received early next morning we fancy there must be something magnetic about these gentlemen, for the game and fish fairly swooped down upon them and for a time their safety was jeopardized. After catching all the fish they wanted(?) and about to start home, a large deer came tearing through the underbrush towards the creek, and had not Brother Hoge been on the alert he would certainly have been run down. Of course, neither had a gun—which perhaps was a good thing for both of them. Their fish, however, were nicely packed in a box and loaded on their wagon, but when about half way home, so it is said, it was discovered that the box, together with the fish had disappeared. After considerable "back tracking," the box was found, but the fish had made good their escape to the creek. This is a true story.
