Russia's Lack of Statesmen. As a matter of fact, there has not been a statesman of the first class in Russia since Peter the Great, and none of the second class unless Nesselrode and the first Emperor Nicholas are to be excepted. To consider Prince Gortchakoff a great chancellor on account of his elaborate dispatches is absurd. To call him a great statesman, in the time of Cayour, Bismarck, Lincoln and Seward, is preposterous, Whatever growth Russia has made in the last forty years has been mainly in spite of the men who have posed before the world as her statesmen: the atmos phere of Russian autocracy is fatal to greatness in her public men .-- Century.
