In the Circuit Court.

The spring term of court opened at Hillsboro last Monday, with Judge McBride on the bench. The jury was dismissed until next Monday and during the intervening time only equity cases were heard. The case of the college vs. the city officials enjoining them from issuing a saloon license, will be heard tomorrow, Friday.

In the Trouble Shop.

William Morley was brought before Recorder King last Tuesday on a complaint sworn out by a Mr. Grubbs, father of the young man whom Morley assaulted Sunday night near Down's restaurant, and fined $5.00 and costs. The fight is the result of an old grudge between the two young men that had its origin in the brickyard last summer.

The fixtures for the new saloon arrived Wednesday and were set up Thursday. They are of oak highly finished and strictly up to date. Bud has not as yet taken out his license but will in a dry or two, when everything is in readiness. The suit to enjoin the city from granting a license will come up in the circuit court at Hillsboro Friday, and as Bud is sanguine as to the results, he promises to open for business on Monday, and when he does, he says that the business shall be conducted in strict accordance with the ordinance.

Abe Teegarden, the artist, is painting some special scenery for the new play soon to be put on the boards by a local talent company. The scenes are composed of a mountain scene, and a parlor setting, both to be used in this play which is entitled "Squatter's Gulch." Watch for announcements later.
