Temperance Talks

BY THE W. C. T. U.

All parents of boys have a deep interest in the following bold statement made in a speech at the State Liquor Dealers Convention in Columbus, Ohio: "It will appear from these facts, gentlemen, that the success of our business is dependent largely upon the creation of an appetite for drink. Men who drink liquor, like others, will die, and, if there is no new appetite created, our counters will be empty, as will be our money drawers. Our children will go hungry, or we must change our business to something more remunerative. The open field for the creation of this appetite is among the boys. After men are grown and their habits are formed, they rarely change in this regard. It will be needful, therefore, that missionary work be done among the boys, and I make the suggestion, gentlemen, that nickles expended in treats to the boys now will return in dollars to your tills after the appetites have been formed. Above all things, create appetites.

Whatever may be thought about this by others, no father or mother of a boy will say that this comment upon it is too severe.

"Could anything be more hellish and diabolical? It simply illustrates the old fact that there are no depths of wickedness or depravity to which men engage in this awful business will not sink, and no iniquitous devices to which they will not resort to entrap and ruin our boys and girls. The saloon is the infernal enemy of the home; it is the malignant and devilish foe of our boys

Some pretty vigorous temperance work has been done in France by means of bill-boards and posters. Flaming announcements suddenly appear all over the city, setting forth the dangers of drink. Here is one of their startling placards just posted so as to attract universal attention: "Alcoholism is the chronic poisoning which results from the habitual use of alcohol, even when this does not produce drunkenness. The habit of drinking brings in its train loss of affection for one's family, forgetfulness of all social duties, distaste for work, misery, robbery and crime. It leads, at least, to the hospital; for alcoholism begets the most various and deadly maladies; paralysis, insanity, affections of the stomach and liver, and dropsy. It is one of the most frequent causes of tuberculosis. Finally, it complicates and aggravates all acute sicknesses; typhoid fever, pneumonia, erysipelas, which would be mild in the case of a sober man, would, on the other hand, kill quickly the alcoholic drinker.

"The parents' sins against the laws of health are visited on their children; if they survive the first months they are threatened with idiocy or epilepsy, or later are carried off by tubercular meningitis or by phthisis.

"With reference to the health of the individual, the existence of the family, and the future of the country, alcoholism is one of the most terrible scourges.

"There are forty thousand mad men who fill the asylums of the department of the Seine and the Paris hospitals, and whose disreputable offspring produce the precocious assassin of eighteen years of age and the twenty-year-old bully."

LOCAL HAPPENINGS

Attorney E. B. Tongue of Hillsboro, was in Forest Grove Sunday.

Miss Myrtle Butler, of LaCourse's store, recited at the Lady's Band Concert, at Hillsboro, Wednesday evening.

J. W. North came up from the Portland Sanitarium, Saturday, to spend Sunday at home. Mr. North has been quite sick, but is improving under the care of that institution.

Volume 1 Number 1 of The Orator, published at Spokane, Wash., has reached our exchange table. Now we, ourselves, are no orator, nor a judge of one, we will refrain from commenting on this neat little booklet, any more than to say that to our notion it will be helpful to those of oratorical inclinations.

Frank Baer Jr., the thirteen year old son of Frank Baer, teamster, was arrested upon a complaint sworn out by Dr. Bishop for truancy and otherwise being a bad boy, and was taken before Judge Rood, Wednesday, but was on Thursday morning released on his own cognizance to appear next week.

An automobile, presumably from Portland, loaded with three or four grown people, a baby or two, and dog, came snorting into town Sunday through the mud, and reminding one of a S. P. freight climbing the Siskiyous. The thing stalled three or four times before it "did" the town right, but notwithstanding the slippery mud so common here, it finally "worked" its way back to the metropolis.

The Lion That Frightened Little Gladys.

LITTLE Gladys had a tremendous imagination, and she both amused and alarmed the family by her big stories. One day she rushed in from the garden and told her mother a breathless tale about a lion who had taken possession of her summer house. "Are you sure it's a lion, Gladys?" asked her mother.

"Oh, yes, mamma. He's a great big fellow."

"Well, we'll go right out and see him," said her mother. "Oh, yes, mamma. He's a great big fellow."

Little Gladys acted as if somewhat confused, but she followed her mother out into the yard. As they neared the summer house she said: "I guess it wasn't a lion, mamma. I guess it was a tiger."

A Hard Case.

"Don't cry, my boy. I'll take you home."

"Thanks, Mr. Cop. And would you mind puttin' handcuffs on me, so's folks 'll think I'm truly arrested?"—San Francisco Examiner.

It served as a revolver. She was dead tired. She had been shopping all the morning, and her feet ached. So did her head. She was too tired to eat, too tired to sit still. She was too tired to ascend the stairs and lie down. Then the telephone bell rang. She crawled to the receiver.

"Yes, this is—oh, is this you, Laura? What's that? Did you? Where did you get it? Mersey! As cheap as that? Why, I paid a dollar more only last week! Where did you say? How lucky! And have they any more left? How much? Oh, only a remnant! About four yards! Yes, I will, I'll go right down. It's so kind of you to call me up. How's George? That's nice! Yes, I'll start right away. Goodbye!"

Then this poor, tired woman put on her hat and wrap and hustled down street again.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Jack Frost's Tears. Not long since Johnny stood at the window trying to see through the frost-work that was slowly melting, when he took out his handkerchief and as each drop of water started down the window thoughtfully wiped it away. When his mother asked him what he was doing he replied:

"Oh, I'm just wiping away Jack Frost's tears."—Philadelphia Ledger.
