Condemn the Court

We the undersigned committee appointed by the chairman of the annual school meeting of school district No. 2, of Cornelius, assembled in regular annual session, wishing to express our indignation and contempt for the action of the County Court of Washington County with reference to the misappropriation of the school funds. And whereas, the County Court has willfully and wrongfully violated the law and openly defied and denied the people their rights in this matter and have arrogated to themselves the right to make rather than to execute the law as it relates to the appropriation of funds for our schools; therefore be it resolved That we condemn the action of the County Court and feel that it is high time for the people to assert themselves, to prevent their being defrauded of their rights; and be it further resolved that these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of this meeting, and that a copy be sent to two of the county papers of this county for publication.

Banner Season in Hops

From all points in the Northwest comes reports of a banner season in hops, but reports from other districts, in California, and reports from the great hop sections of the world, make all predictions difficult. It is said that unfavorable reports are being sent out in order to influence sales. A few premature offers were made last week, but were immediately accepted. It is said that offers made were eagerly accepted at 19½ and 20 cents. The ideal weather for the past week has made the local hop outlook very bright. Estimates of the coming yield for Oregon hops are from 100,000 to 110,000 bales. The outlook in Washington is also bright and it is thought that the yield in that state will be 8,000 bales over the amount grown last year. Rumors of a crop failure in California say that the yield there will fall short by a few thousand bales of the 60,000 that were grown last year. Estimates which may and may not be exactly correct place the number of bales for the Pacific Coast at 210,000. Eastern crop reports are generally favorable, especially in New York. In Europe it is said that everything is favorable to a large yield. The hop market though will depend upon England, and reports from there are too conflicting to give an accurate estimate. There are reports of an utter failure in the hop crop, and other reports of a bumper crop.—Oregon Tradesman.

Cleland and J. M. Hodson, of Portland, M. S. Woodcock, of Corvallis, were re-elected trustees.

Weekly Crop Bulletin

Commenting on the influence of weather on crops in Oregon for the past week, the Portland office of the Weather Bureau makes the following statement:
 The weather during the past week has been quite favorable for the growing crops. In some few localities late sown wheat and oats would be benefited by more rain, and owing to the dry weather grass on the lowland ranges in the interior counties is turning brown, but it is still green and abundant in the foothills and mountains. Stock generally is in excellent condition. Fall wheat is filling nicely, and fall barley is ripening and will soon be ready to cut. Spring wheat continues to make satisfactory progress, and oats, although not in so good condition as Spring wheat, look promising. The grain aphid is disappearing, and no great damage has been done by this pest. Haying has begun and will become general in a week or two. Much clover, vetch and alfalfa has already been secured, and the hay crop generally promises to be an average one, if not better. Hops are arming and show considerable improvement since last report. The yards are well cultivated, but on account of missing hills and uneven growth, yields are expected to be less than usual. Early potatoes are in the market. Cherries are ripe and the crop is below the average, being good in some localities and almost a failure in others. Strawberry-picking is nearly finished and the crop turned out to be below the average in quantity, but about as usual in quality.

A STRIKING EXAMPLE OF THE BUSINESS BENEFITS OF PROHIBITION

The argument that driving the saloons from a town or city ruins it from a business standpoint has been refuted so often that it seems useless to present more evidence to the contrary. But as the argument is still being used, and business men are being deceived thereby, it seems wise to keep the facts before the public.

Farmland, Indiana, is a beautiful town of a little more than a thousand inhabitants. The saloons were driven from the town a little more than a year ago, and the law has been enforced so that the town is indeed, a "dry" one.

Sunday, October 2, was set aside as Anti-Saloon League Sunday. Our representative reached the city about eight o'clock on Saturday night. He was surprised to find the town crowded with people and the business men so rushed that they were scarcely able to wait on their customers. We never saw so many people in a grocery store at one time in our lives. We tried to get the opportunity to talk with the proprietor, but he was too busy. We talked with him early Monday morning. When asked how his business had been affected by the absence of the saloon, he replied that it had been just doubled.

When asked how he accounted for it, he said it was very plain that men who had, under the old regime, taken seventy-five cents worth of groceries home on Saturday night and spent the remainder of their money in the saloon, now took $2.00 or $3.00 worth of groceries home on Saturday night, and had money left.

On Monday morning, we approached the banker, and asked him how his business had been affected by the absence of the saloon. He stated that when they had saloons, there was but one bank in the town. Now they had two, and another bank has been started in a town eight miles north, which comes in competition with these two banks, but in spite of these facts, "we are now doing a larger business than we did when we had saloons."

If any business man is inclined to believe the statements of saloon sympathizers, that the absence of the saloon will injure business, we wish he would visit Farmland and interview any business man, except the saloon men. He will find it stated unanimously that business conditions are much better than when they had saloons.

Driving the saloons out of a town injures the saloon business, but benefits every other line of business—Exchange.

Every man in favor of the existence of a saloon under any consideration is the boy's worst enemy. Mix the boys with the saloons and the result is bad men.—American Issue.
