DARING RAILROAD PROPOSITION.

ROUTE OF THE RAILROAD TO KEY WEST.

The sort of railroading which appeals to the public mind, by reason of its daring and by the new problems which it often presents to the engineer, is that through mountain regions, but it has remained for Henry M. Flagler, who has been termed "The Wizard of Florida," to take in hand some railway construction which is not only unique, but daring to the last degree. This task is the extension of his Florida East Coast Railway, which has for some years been in operation between St. Augustine and Miami, 154 miles southwestward and northwestward from the latter point to the important island of Key West. The construction of the extension is proceeding rapidly. The road will traverse for a considerable distance a ridge or slight elevation of allitic limestone, and passing beyond this will reach sand, the mangrove, that strange tree which reaches its roots downward into the water from the limbs above being for a long distance the principal vegetation. Then the road will strike considerable stretches of water, more or less shallow, but always the foundation will be one of the finest and most substantial imaginable, namely, coral rock.

The construction will be of the most expensive and durable character, and everything will make for absolute safety. The first survey was for a line to Cape Sable, but when this was made Mr. Flagler found that he was sixty miles from Key West and twelve miles from what is known as the three fathom line of the gulf. He therefore decided to undertake the greater proposition, and so changed the line from Homestead and is building more nearly along what may be called the general line of the coast.

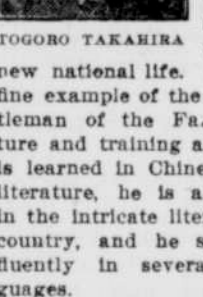

In a scenic way this road will be notable. The views it will give of those beautiful southern waters, with all their tenderness of tint, with the scores of "keys" or islands and inlets, great and small, will make it like a voyage in wonderland. The line will pass from key to key, and the first deep water it will strike will be at what is known as Knight's Key, where there will be a channel thirteen feet in depth.

Several drawbridges will be constructed, some for the use of the small vessels which are engaged in the sponge fisheries, the seat of the sponge trade being Key West.

TACTFUL MR. TAKAHIRA.

Japanese Minister to America Rose from the Ranks.

The career and experience of Togo Takahira embraces most of the varied changes in modern Japanese history, says the Review of Reviews. In his early youth he felt keenly and deeply the ancient feud of samurai and shogun, and when Japan abandoned the old order and set her face toward the new he swung into and developed with the new national life. Mr. Takahira is a fine example of the diplomat and gentleman of the Far East. His culture and training are many-sided—he is learned in Chinese philosophy and literature, he is a thorough scholar in the intricate literature of his own country, and he speaks and writes fluently in several European languages.

Mr. Takahira is not of the titled class—he has risen from the ranks. Entering the imperial diplomatic service in 1876, after a thorough education at the Japanese capital, he was appointed attaché to the Japanese legation in Washington, becoming secretary of that legation in 1881. Two years later he was appointed secretary of the Foreign office. Later, he held a number of important posts, including those of charge d'affaires in Korea (1885), consul general at New York (1891), minister resident to Holland (1892), minister to Italy (1894), minister to Austria (1896), vice minister for foreign affairs (1899) and vice minister to the United States (1900).

The Japanese minister is a man of middle age, of a strong, well-built frame, but broken somewhat from his experience of last winter, when he was operated on for appendicitis. Tactful and diplomatic, a dignified diplomat through and through, Mr. Takahira has creditably represented Japanese interests throughout the present difficult period of the war. He has only courageous expressions of appreciation for the admirable qualities of the Russian people, whom he understands thoroughly. He does not look for peace in the near future, but says that Japan is quite ready and prepared to continue the conflict as long as may be necessary. As to the possibility which has been suggested of a Russo-Japanese alliance after peace has been concluded, Mr. Takahira declares this can never be. The Japanese people, he points out, have been educated, politically, along Anglo-Saxon lines, and it would be very difficult to change this national bent. A Franco-Russian alliance might be possible, but a Russo-Japanese alliance never.

Teeth Not Bones at All.
Professor E. Symes Thompson, Graham professor of medicine, in the course of an address at the Polytechnic, Regent street, London, on "The Evolution and Degeneration of the Teeth," remarked that while the bones of man and animals had decayed greatly during the last 4,000 or 1,000 years, the teeth had been preserved in a much better condition. Teeth were not part of bones, but part of the skin—they were, in fact, dermal appendages. Old people were surprised to find that when the teeth of the lower jaw departed there was very little of the jaw left. This produced what was called the nut-cracker physiognomy. Referring to the fact that the crocodile had an animated toothpick in the form of a bird, which removed foreign matter, the lecturer enforced the lesson of the necessity of attending carefully to the cleansing of the teeth and recommended attention to them at night as being more important than in the morning.

"No News to Speak Of."
A country correspondent of the Adams Enterprise sends in these interesting items:
"There is no news to speak of in this here settlement. Bud Spurlin was bit by one rattlesnake and two moccasins yesterday and is feeling unwell at this writing."
"The supper for the benefit of the new church bell was largely attended. (That is the hungriest bell in this neighborhood.)"
"Ma, Jones happened to the accident of havin' his head blowed off Tuesday. Don't know how high it was blowed, as it hasn't come down yet."
"The jug-train with ninety gallons of spirits aboard, was wrecked by unknown miscreants Saturday night, and in consequence Sunday in town was dry enough to burn."
"I will close as there is no news to speak of, as I said before, wishing success to the paper and all good citizens."—Atlanta Constitution.

No Reason for Two Trips
Patrick's wife was "alling," and Patrick put on his Sunday best and walked four miles to the doctor's house to tell him about her.
"Now," said the doctor, when he had heard all Patrick had to say, and had prepared some medicine, "here is something for your wife. I've written the directions on the bottle, and I want her to try it faithfully for a fortnight. Then, if it doesn't relieve her, come to me again, and I will give you another prescription."
"Now, docther, see here," said Patrick, standing straight and looking grimly at the physician. "If you have your doubts o' this curin' Mary, as it's evident you have by the way you spake, why don't you give me first what you're goin' to give me last?"

The young woman in the stern of the little boat had whispered softly the word "Jack." "But stay right where you are, Jack," she added, hastily; "if you try to kiss me you'll upset the boat." "How do you know?" hoarsely demanded Jack, a horrible suspicion already taking possession of him. —Chicago Tribune.

Visitor.—Quite a neat little place, that one with the green shutters. Who lives there? Host.—That's Cooper's house. He had a rich uncle, who left him all his money. Visitor.—Oh! and whose is that magnificent mansion over there? Host.—That belongs to the lawyer who settled up Cooper's uncle's affairs.—Casell's.

Judge Phillips' Big Fish.
"There is no fishing in the world like the sport in the Gulf of Mexico, where they catch tarpon," said Judge John F. Phillips, recently in the Kansas City Star. Judge Phillips, looking tanned and thoroughly rested, has just returned from a fishing trip to the coast of Texas. "I surprised the natives by catching six of those big fellows. The largest weighed 135 pounds and measured 6 feet 10 inches in length. It took me an hour to land him after I had made the strike."
"The tarpon is caught on a heavy line and a specially strong rod and reel. I had just told my boatman that I would go in for dinner and we had just started to put back to the shores from where we had been fishing, perhaps a mile out to sea, when I hooked the big fish. By playing with him, reeling him in and maneuvering back and forth for an hour I finally pulled him into shallow water. The boatman then leaped out in water up to his waist and, striking the fish with a gaff hook, hauled him up on the beach. Catching tarpon is strenuous exercise," added Judge Phillips, "but as a sport it is not equaled."

High Toned.
"Maudie says her steady is a high-toned young feller."
"Geel! That's a good name for it, all right. He's one of these squeaky-voiced sissies."—Cleveland Leader.

There are not many people whose visits are as interesting as a continued story in a ten-cent magazine.

SKIN DISEASES SPEAK FOR THE BLOOD

Skin Diseases speak for the blood and tell of the acid-laden, poisonous condition of that vital fluid, and of its effort to throw off and rid the system of the poisons and waste matters that have accumulated in it. Eczema, Tetter, Acne, Salt Rheum, Psoriasis, Boils and diseases of this type are all caused by a weakened and polluted blood circulation, and though they may have lain dormant in the system during the cold weather, at the coming of Spring and Summer, when the blood is reacting and making extra efforts to expel all morbid and poisonous matter, they make their appearance. External remedies cannot cure; they soothe and give temporary relief, but often clog the pores and glands, and the poison causing the trouble is thus shut up in the system to break out afresh later on. S. S. S., a purely vegetable blood remedy, cures all skin diseases by going down into the circulation, driving out all poisons and waste matters, strengthening the blood, leaving the skin soft and smooth, and building up the entire system by its tonic effect. S. S. S. cures Nettle Rash, Poison Oak and all skin diseases that enter the system through the pores and glands, as well as those that have their origin in the blood. Book on Skin Diseases and any advice wished, without charge.

In 1896 I experienced at times patches on the inside of my hands that itched and burned, causing much discomfort. I was convinced I was afflicted with a type of Eczema. I consulted several physicians, and used several external applications, receiving but slight temporary relief. I decided to try S. S. S., and soon I found myself entirely cured. ### BIGGEST WINDMILL OF ALL.

Pumps Water Into Golden Gate Park in San Francisco.
The largest windmill in the United States, if, indeed, not the largest in the whole world, has recently been constructed near San Francisco. This gigantic mill is located directly on the ocean beach, near the famous seal rocks. It is used for pumping water up into Golden Gate Park.

The huge, strong wooden tower supporting the wind arms rises 130 feet. It is 40 feet square at the base, securely anchored and gradually tapers upward, assuming a round shape.

There are four immense wooden arms, or vanes. Each arm measures 80 feet from the center or hub—thus making a diameter of 160 feet in describing the circle. The wind vanes are 6 feet wide and extend nearly the entire length of the huge arms.

This windmill is located upon a prominent elevation, so that it may catch every available wind arising in that section.

This colossal windmill is capable of developing 50-horse power. Its pumping capacity is 200,000 gallons of water every twenty-four hours.

The water is taken from the wells and forced through a large iron main sixteen inches in diameter, for nearly four miles up into an immense reservoir several hundred feet higher than the ocean beach. From this reservoir the water is distributed in all directions through the park.

During the dry, hot season the arms of this giant windmill are kept whirling day and night to supply the thirsty demand. As the mill stands on the wide, open beach, there is rarely, if ever, any lack of wind; in fact, the winds occasionally blow with such violence that the mill is compelled to be shut down, as it would be risky to attempt to run it during a fierce gale.

The Sorrow of It.

"Somehow," remarked young De Borem, "I am awfully stupid to-night."
"Indeed you are," retorted Miss Costique, somewhat impulsively.
"Do you really mean that?" asked the young man, in surprise.

"I merely indorsed your statement. Didn't you just now assert that you were awfully stupid?" she asked.
"—es," he admitted, "but I merely said so without thinking."
"And up to the time you spoke of it," rejoined the matter-of-fact maid, "I only thought so without saying it."

Sympathetic.

Mrs. Brown—Have you heard from your son since he got that newspaper job in the city?
Mrs. Green (proudly)—Yes, indeed; and he writes me that he is going to try his hand at poetry. Ah! who would have thought that I should ever be known as the mother of a poet!

Mrs. Brown—Oh, well, I wouldn't worry about it if I were you. Remember, he is young yet, and he'll probably have better sense when he's older.

Grounds for Divorce.

Newed—Alas! I am a disappointed man. My wife cannot sing.
Oldwed—Can't sing! Why, man, that ought to be a cause for rejoicing. You are to be congratulated.
Newed—Yes, but the trouble is she thinks she can.
