One of our Minnesota exchanges makes the following statement concerning flour-making in that state: "Pillsbury A mill in Minneapolis turned out 15,267 barrels of flour in the twenty-four hours closing with Saturday of last week, and thus broke the world's record for one day's grinding of flour in one mill. And it is asserted that this is more than any other two mills in the world are capable of turning out in the same time. Seventy thousand bushel of wheat were required to make the 15,267 barrels of flour and 500 men working in three shifts took part in the accomplishment. The previous high record was 15,000 barrels."
