

HILLSIDE

The Clapshaws gave a Hallowe'en party, for the Hillside young people. All report a good time.

Mrs. Fry, a former resident of Hillside who has been visiting relatives and old neighbors at this place, left for her home in Washington last week.

Miss Meda Staley is on the sick list this week.

Charles Bamford has been having the toothache for a few days.

John Cornelius is building a barn on his place.

A large bear has been visiting Mrs. Faul's apple orchard of late.

Prof. Frank, Miss Eva and Mrs. Fletcher were guests of Tom Williams' family Saturday and Sunday.

Mr. Curtis's friends left last week for their home in Kansas.

Roy Watkins spent a few days last week, hunting at Hillside.

N. J. Baker has been learning how to use a hammerless shot gun of late. He said, as he picked up the gun the other day, "Which way is the slide when it is safe?" and before anyone could answer him it answered for itself by blowing a hole through the ceiling of his house.

Aged Farmer Dies.

Jacob Messinger, aged 84 years, a well known farmer of Washington county, died at his home at Laurel, November 1st. He was an Ohioan by birth and when a young man he moved to Indiana and subsequently settled in Iowa and Oregon, where in 1862, he settled in Yamhill county. In 1876, he came to Laurel where he has resided ever since. His wife died in 1900. He leaves the following children: J. W. Messinger, of Thoro; Mrs. C. P. Dix of Portland; M. F., and Jacob A., both of Laurel; and J. A., of Hillsboro.

More Medals at Fair.

The Dilley Lewis and Clark Club was awarded a bronze medal for fruits preserved in jars.

The Beaverton Roller Mills of Beaverton; the Crescent Mills, Forest Grove; and the Gaston Roller Mills, Gaston were each awarded a bronze medal for their respective flour exhibit.

Equal Suffragists Meet.

At the home of Mrs. G. O. Rogers. Friday evening, a number of persons interested in equal suffrage met to effect an organization that will work indefatigably to promulgate that doctrine during the coming campaign. The club has already 21 members and membership is open to both men and women. The officers chosen at the meeting were: Mrs. Boldrick, president; Rev. Herbert Boyd, 1st vice-president; Mrs. G. O. Rogers, 2nd vice-president; L. C. Walker, auditor; W. K. Curtis, secretary; Mrs. Graham, treasurer. The Rev. Cephas Clapp was chosen a delegate to the state convention which met in Portland yesterday. The meetings of the club are to be held once a month. Special work is to be done by the club from now until the June election when the voters will be asked to consider an equal suffrage amendment to the state constitution.

Death to Football

Principal Edwin Allen of the Public schools, has decreed that football will not be tolerated on the school play grounds. This decision is made imperative on account of the roughness with which the youngsters handle one another while kicking the pigskin. Mr. Allen entertains strong doubts as to the benefits derived from football when played by grammar school boys. A year ago, when in charge of the Dilley school, one of his pupils had the misfortune to suffer a leg fracture which kept the boy out of school for several months. Since the opening of the football season by the college boys the fever has spread to the public schools and several of the pupils there have been seriously hurt until it was thought best to stop the game all together. In this order the principal has the support of the school board although the latter has not yet taken official action on the matter.

Mr. Allen dislikes very much to deprive his pupils of any legitimate sport and though the order may be severe it is intended to promote wholesome instead of brutal amusement.

GORGEOUS ATTIRE.

Dress of a Liverpool Merchant in the Eighteenth Century.

The Liverpool merchant in the latter half of the eighteenth century must have presented a by no means unpleasing appearance. He dressed, as a rule, we are informed, in a suit of one color, usually light or of a stoffy shade. The cut of his ordinary coat resembled that of a court dress coat, with standup collar and gilt, silvered, twist or basket buttons. His waistcoat was very long, with large "flaps," containing flapped pockets, these often decorated with buttons. His breeches, being short, were ornamented at the knees with buckles of gold, silver or stone, kept in countenance by large gold, silver or gilt buckles on his shoes, his legs being hosed, as a rule, in silk, plain, striped or ribbed. Ruffles at his wrist and a white stock about his throat were an almost invariable accompaniment, and on his head a cocked hat, pointed in front and higher at the back than the sides, over hair dressed into large "cannon" curls on each side of his face, with a cue hanging behind, or it might be over a "tie," "cauliflower" or "brown bob" wig. Thus, with stick or umbrella, rendered remarkable by reason of its head of gold, silver, amber or ebony, would he wend his way to "town." In "full dress" he must have even more attractively looked the merchant "prince" in his waistcoat of silk, satin or velvet rich in color and design, with long flaps elaborately embroidered, silk breeches and silk hose, with conspicuous knee and shoe buckles. If he on occasion dined with the mayor he might receive an engraved invitation card similar to the following, directed to Mr. Leece in 1776: "Mr. Mayor presents his compliments to Mr. Leece, begs the favor of his company on Sunday next to dinner, at 1 o'clock, at the Exchange. An answer is desired. 12th July, '76."

BUNDLE BEARERS.

A Role That City Men Are Now Inclined to Play.

There was a time, remembered easily by many, when the tender husband did not shrink from carrying home materials for his dinner. Men of learning in those simpler days grasped the coil of commerce, as the coil of science, by the tail. The statesman with Jovian brow and blue coat with brass buttons was very human with a dried codfish wrapped carefully in brown paper under his elegant arm. To see a highly respectable citizen with a demijohn was a cheering sight. Nor was it beneath the dignity of a painful preacher of the word of God to carry a pair of trousers to the tailor when the rent was beyond the skill of domestic ingenuity.

The present civilization may be real or chromo; that is at least is certain—the age of carrying bundles is gone so far as city men are concerned, although no Burke has celebrated in sonorous prose its passing. The man protests against the burden of a can of peas, a jar of marmalade, his wife's bank book. The youth insists that the two or three collars bought to bridge him over the weekly coming of the laundryman shall be sent home. The schoolboy, however his mother may coax or threaten, sulks at the thought of a bundle, for he fears the ridicule of snobbishly trained companions.

The bundle is avoided, not respected, as it was by the great Napoleon. Democratic simplicity is found only in tradition and in De Toqueville's book. It is not surprising that the bundle should be spurned; that a fashionable mother may not be able to support the weight of her own baby in the street.—Boston Herald.

A Raft of Cocoanuts.

A curious picture in the Far Eastern Review, Manila, shows several coconut rafts in a still lagoon, apparently ready to go to market. The cocoanuts are much lighter than water. They are simply thrown in by the thousand and then roped together by long strands of bark fiber into circular groups about twenty feet across, all the cocoanuts lying side by side. A single native boat can tow a number of these odd rafts down a sluggish stream where no road could be found for ordinary transport to a steamer wharf. Cocoanuts thus rafted will bear quite a bit of wind and rough water without being scattered.

Don't Waste.

Let nothing be wasted or lost. Using well or wasting the fragments of time, of opportunity, the nooks and corners of life, makes all the difference between success and failure. This is especially true of spiritual work. Often the best results are gained from the use of fragments of our business or daily life, the byproducts of living. Nature says, "Gather up the fragments." In nature's household there is no waste. The decay of rocks forms the soil of plants. The decay of plants forms the mold in which future plants will grow. The water dissipated in the air becomes clouds and rain.—Woman's Life.

Near the Danger Line.

In an account of a recent London tragedy a slip is made by a contemporary. It explains that "three doctors are in attendance, but the woman is not yet dead." Not long ago a daily nearly got into a libel action by saying that a patient was "no longer in danger, though Dr. X. is still visiting him."—London Globe.

INCREASING MEMBERSHIP.

How the State Grange May Help Subordinate Granges.

Discussing the topic, "What Policy Should Be Adopted by the State Grange For Increasing Membership in the State?" the national lecturer remarks that it should adopt a vigorous policy for increase of membership and aid the subordinate granges in the matter. One of the means of doing this is preparing a list of persons eligible to the grange within the jurisdiction of subordinate granges and also in new fields, and mail to such persons circulars of information, reports of the state grange session and other literature bearing upon the work of the grange. The officers of the subordinate grange having jurisdiction should be informed of this action on the part of the state grange and an effort made to secure the application of these people. In localities where no grange exists a deputy of the state grange should follow up this work with a personal canvass for charter members of a new grange. Effort in this direction should be continuous, covering several years. If necessary, and a large increase in membership will follow. It is the method adopted by business concerns in the introduction of their goods. However meritorious an organization may be, it will not increase in membership without earnest effort in that direction.

Another means for increasing membership on the part of the state grange is the award of prizes for a specified net increase in any subordinate grange during the year. It may be argued that such stimulus to effort may cause the admission of unworthy persons, but such is not the case where it has been practiced. Should an unworthy person be admitted through this practice, the uplifting influence of the grange would soon have its effect upon that person, or the person so admitted would find the social atmosphere of the grange ungenial, causing him or her to withdraw. There is less danger of the admission of unworthy persons under any conditions than is generally supposed, for they do not readily affiliate with worthy people.

Still another means of increasing membership on the part of the state grange, and one more generally practiced than either of those we have mentioned, is the public discussion of the objects and purposes of the Order at public meetings by speakers furnished by the state grange. It is not usually advisable for the state grange to call a meeting for this purpose on account of the lack of local interest under such arrangements, but a local grange or a committee of citizens where no local organization exists should take the initiative and issue the call for the meeting. Such meetings in order to be successful must be followed with an active canvass for applicants, either to existing granges or for the formation of new granges. Increase of membership is the result of effort along business lines and a very different matter from promoting the educational and fraternal work among those already members.

FRATERNAL DELEGATES.

State Granges Should Fraternalize and Compare Methods.

Why would it not be a good idea for state granges at their annual meetings to select or for the worthy master to appoint fraternal delegates to meetings of other state granges? This would serve to increase the feeling of fraternity existing between these bodies and enhance the interest which one state grange should take in the work of the other.

Furthermore, to represent a state grange on such an occasion would be deemed an honor quite sufficient to compensate the delegate chosen for the expense incurred. Men and women could easily be found at every state grange meeting who would appreciate the opportunity. This would, of course, be entirely apart from the fraternal visitation of a state grange by the master of another, a custom already happily in vogue. The purpose of the appointment of such fraternal delegates would not simply be to carry fraternal greetings, but carefully to observe the workings of the grange visited and report on the same to the next annual meeting in order that methods worthy of emulation might be adopted if deemed advisable. All state granges are working for the same general end, even as are all subordinate granges, but the methods differ. Let us choose the best and most feasible.
