NORTH MAIN STREET FOREST GROVE, ORE

Money in English Walnuts

The Willamette Valley has proved to be the ideal and natural home of the English Walnut. Producing a larger yield, and a larger and better flavored nut than California.

Crops never fail. No machinery required.

Free from fungus growths and insect pests. No special season for marketing, demand good at all seasons of the year.

You have the use of the land for other crops while the orchard is growing.

One acre planted with 50 walnut trees and cultivated for 10 years will pay ten per cent on a valuation of six thousand dollars.

Commence to bear the fifth year.

Will grow on any kind of land, hill, valley or bottom.

We have made arrangements with the largest nursery in the valley, to sell their trees at the nursery price.
