FIREMEN GIVEN BIG BANQUET.
W. A. Williams Feasts the Fire Department at the Laughlin Hotel.
Sunday evening after the recall was responded to by the fire department, Mr. W. A. Williams adjuster for the fire insurance company in which the Herrick Hall policy was held invited the members of the fire company to the Laughlin hotel where a banquet was served to the men who had fought so courageously and resolutely for the ladies' hall a few hours before.
It was shortly after six o'clock when the call bell was sounded and the fire company called out again to render the situation more secure for the night by putting a few finishing touches to the charred ruins of Herrick Hall. When this had been done Mr. Williams who had been present during the entire fight issued an invitation to all members of the fire company to join him at the Laughlin where a magnificent feast was spread before them. Mr. Williams in a speech which he was called upon later to make said that he had witnessed many fires but had never seen better work done by a volunteer company; they seemed to be well organized and under the adverse conditions it was marvelous how the fire was held in check for so long a time. President Ferrin was also present and when called upon said that he was very greatly pleased by the efforts made by the fire department and felt that the whole school and all therewith connected were very grateful towards the local organization. He stated also that the company deserves the commendation of the whole community and that he himself would always feel it an honor to help them towards increasing their supply of apparatus or in any other way that he was able.

The entertainment and carpet social given by the Dilley school under the management of Miss Welte and Miss Fields, proved a financial and social success. The first number was a song, "Hear Dem Bells" by four pupils, imitating darkies. A very interesting feature followed, a recitation, "The Minuet," by two pupils of the primary department, Mary Hamel and Lester Hughes, dressed in Colonial style. The advanced grades displayed their ability in the farce, and a "Lady's Note." The most attractive feature of the evening was the debate, "Resolved, 'That Woman is more to be considered than Man,'" which was handled by the pupils of the eighth grade. The affirmative speakers were John Conwell, Cecil Tupper and Walter Wolfe. The negative: Leatha Tupper, Ruth Peachin and Lizzie Briggant. The three judges chosen were: Messings of Van Meter, Henry Freund and the court Freund, who decided in favor of the negative. After the exercises refreshments were served and games played until a late hour.
Some quite extensive operations are being carried out in one of the most remote of our neighboring towns of which we hear little and of which we might know more. Carlton is the name of this enterprising little "burg" It is soon to have one of the largest saw mills in the state—with a capacity of 100,000 feet. Already an artificial pond four miles long has been constructed and steam dredgers are at work making it wider. Over 100,000 feet of logs have been floated into the lake from two large camps—one at the headwaters of the Fairchilds and the other at the headwaters of the Yamhill river. The Howe Lumber Company, financed by the Portland Trust Company is engineering the project. This company controls two or three mountains of standing timber between North Yamhill and Tillamook. Carlton is located a hospital, a hotel and a store either of which will compare very favorably indeed with like structures on the West side—controlled by the same interests. The people of Carlton are using the place for pleasure purposes and launches no novelty in this town. It might be well to keep an eye on some of our neighbors especially these "Yamhillers."
