THURSDAY, MAY 10, 1906.

Men with thousands of dollars, and who lost nothing by the fire or earthquake in California, not only accepted but satiated charity, and seeing an opportunity to get a free ride, took advantage of the terrible conditions, obtained free transportation to friends North, East, or South. They would have you think they lost thousands, and look at you with contempt if by your look or speech would seem to doubt their sincerity. There are those however, who did lose thousands of dollars, but who are not making a display of their sad misfortune, but refer to it with reluctance, and accept the charity of the world temporarily because it is absolutely necessary to prevent suffering. They are the real sufferers and it is to such that the world gives and gives generously and gladly, esteeming it a privilege to divide their worldly possessions with them.

ANOTHER HOLIDAY.

The proposal to make May 2 a perpetual legal holiday throughout the state at the next session of the Legislature is strongly supported by a feeling of loyalty to the forces of the past which put the machinery of state in motion. The objection to it is the stock objection to another holiday and the consequent interruption of business, always more or less annoying and detrimental to the financial interests of the community. If this movement is successful, there will be two legal holidays in May—the 2nd and the 30th—followed in little more than a month by the great National holiday, two months farther on by Labor Day, and in the next month but one by Thanksgiving, after which comes Christmas, when the round begins again with New Year's.

No one protests seriously against these holidays, but every employer and business man knows that each one disrupts the regular order of things for several days. Hence, as before said, the stock opposition to the making of additional legal holidays.

However, as all loyal Oregonians will allow, May 2, 1843, was a day of great and far-reaching significance, not only to Oregon but to the Pacific Northwest. This being true, the objection to placing another legal holiday on the state's calendar of idle days may be overruled. The Oregonian will not be affected by it one way or the other since it goes to press every day in the year and reports in their regular order the occurrences of holidays and all other days. It agrees with other business concerns, however, that it is a great inconvenience to have banks and stores close, postoffice delivery stop and general industry and business suspended operations on an average of one working day a month throughout the year.—Oregonian.

Railroad Pointers.

By the first of June cars will be running on the Forest Grove Transportation Company's line. President Haines has given assurance that if everything moves along as smoothly as expected Commencement visitors will be received from the depot in true urban style.

The track is practically laid, the poles have all been set and the wire has arrived. The big brackets are expected daily and the cars in the city are nearing completion. The car for passengers has already received one coat of paint and only the finishing touches are needed to make it ready for use. The car, however, will not be sent out to Forest Grove until the freight car is completed with it which will not be long as the work of building such a car is more simple.

THE "MADE IN OREGON" PROJECT

A Promotion of the Benefits of the Lewis & Clark

"Oregon flies with her own wings," indeed but Oregon doesn't know it. The importance of our state as a manufacturing community is not sufficiently understood even by her own people. No matter how much we may be able to aid the Admen's League in this unique scheme, we shall ever owe them a great debt for the conducting of the enterprise to show people what Oregon makes.

Our native capabilities and resources will be exploited to the fullest extent in the effort to make a display that will convince, and the exhibition of Oregon made articles, to be made from May 19 to 26 at Portland, will demonstrate to Oregon consumers what can be made in Oregon.

The object is to protect Oregon goods, to instruct our buyers in the advantages to himself of confining his purchases to "Oregon made" and teaching him that products marked "made in Germany" or "union made."

Every dollar paid out for the manufactured article brought into the state from the East goes to build up industries and help the farmer of a community thousands of miles away with no possibility of participating in resultant benefits. Every increase of industry in the city of Portland will enlarge the demand for material of all kinds in this community and benefits thereby derived will directly accrue to the local purchaser.

The Lewis and Clarke Exposition served to wake up the old mossback state of Oregon and she has been born again, as it were, and the Oregonian no longer lingers by the wayside waiting for the crops to grow and indifferent to the webs between his toes, but has aroused himself and shown to the world the industry and diligent enterprise that won for him the new title of "beaver." No more will he waste the sap of his youth by sending his money outside to purchase articles that benefits him not, while his own manufacturers are clamoring for patronage and co-operation to make Oregon the state of states.

The Care of Shade Trees

It will be well to look to the shade trees early in the season. The gypsy moth, which infested maples in many parts of the country late last fall, may have left eggs which escaped the application of insecticide advised at that time. I would advise going over these trees this month with the following preparation which I have found better than anything else I have ever tried: Melt a pound of Ivory soap and mix with it, while quite warm, one pint of kerosene. Agitate until complete union takes place. The mixture can then be added to 12 quarts of water. An emulsion will readily be formed by the operation of the sprayer. Spray the trees thoroughly among their branches, but scrub their trunks, using for this part of the work a stiff bristled scrubbing-brush, with handle inserted in the side instead of the top. This will enable you to get the emulsion well in among the bark, where eggs may have been deposited. If insects appear, repeat the application.

In fighting tree enemies, not much can be accomplished in town or village where residences are close together unless all property owners work in union with each other. If A and C will do nothing to rout the pest, B's efforts will count for little. Here is where community interests should prompt each lot owner to cooperate heartily with his neighbor.—Outing Magazine.

Mr. Blair is constructing a new building near C. O. Roe's residence, for the purpose of establishing a laundry. He will move his old machinery from the City Laundry site to the new location immediately.

San Francisco's Call for Help

The officials of the Southern Pacific have set out the following communication asserting the necessity of continued operations in order to relieve the suffering humanity in the Bay City.

From Oakland, Calif.

J. P. O'Brien—

Having gone over the situation in San Francisco, I am deeply impressed with the necessity of urgent forwarding of food stuffs with which to feed the 200,000 homeless people. The situation is well organized and the United States Quartermaster's Department is receiving and distributing, through its channels and through various local relief associations, all supplies as fast as they arrive, but the fact should be made public in all quarters that it will require continued efforts on the part of everyone to keep supplies coming. The railroads are of course handling all such supplies without charge and the people must respond to calls for relief.

(Signed) E. H. HARRIMAN, President.

J. P. O'Brien:

Please notify all your people who are furnishing supplies that they are being received in good shape and are well distributed to the needy through the Army Commissary Department. The Northwest is doing remarkably well in this emergency.

(Signed) E. E. CALVIN, Gen. Mgr. of S. P. Co.

Loyal Temperance Legion

The Loyal Temperance Legion observed their first anniversary last Sabbath by inviting their friends and giving a short program of songs, recitations and responsive readings which was very entertaining and showed the efficient and untiring work of their superintendents and leaders as well as the competent corps of teachers and helpers.

In turn they were entertained with short addresses by Rev. Belknap and Mrs. Boldrick and a couple of songs by Mrs. Chapman sung in her charming manner.

Their reports show an increase from fifty charter members to an enrollment of 125 and an average attendance of about eighty-one.

They meet during this month in the Congregational church and will be glad of visitors at any time.

Oldest Living Democrat

Grandma Mary Ramsey Wood, who will soon reach her 119th birthday, recently received some relics from Mrs. Alice Briggs, of La Junta, Col., consisting of some cotton spun by hand 45 years ago, and out of which Southern women were wont to make their dresses; some moss from the grave of the poetess, Helen Hunt Jackson; and some silk, which was raised in Kentucky. Mrs. Briggs also sent Mrs. Wood a silk ribbon, on which she wishes the centenarian to tie a single knot for each year of her age. Recently a negro from Knoxville, Tenn., sent Mrs. Wood a cane cut from a Tennessee blue beech, a hundred years ago. It is in an excellent state of preservation, and was cut by the father of the person who sent it. Grandma Wood is now at her best as compared to any time for several years, but says she does not know how long it will last. When the Argus reporter greeted the aged woman with, "Well, you old democrat, how are you getting along," she smiled and said, "Fine, and if the women get a vote I want to live long enough to vote for a democratic president." She has had what is perhaps her last picture taken, and they are in the hands of her daughter, Mrs. Catherine Reynolds, who is disposing of them at a nominal price as mementoes, for the old lady's benefit.—Hillsboro Argus.

Eugene will not have a municipal waterworks system, as the local company is fulfilling all promises made at the time of the purchase. New filters are in place, and the 1,000,000 gallon reservoir is being built.—Ex.
