THE COFFEE PLANT.

Native of Abyssinia That Was Transported to Arabia.

The origin of coffee is lost in the mists of antiquity, but the plant is bedeved to be a native of Abyssinia and look forward to than either of these to have been carried thence into Arabia others, so we can live in hope that early in the fifteenth century, whence the Meccan pilgrims soon carried it to all parts of the Mohammedan world. A bureau of commerce and labor publeation notes that Burton in his "Anatomy of Melancholy" (1621) makes this reference to it: "Turks have a drink called coffee, so named from a berry black as soot and as bitter, which they sip up hot, because they find by experince that that kind of drink so used helpeth digestion and promoteth alac-

engine this season. Mr. Rasmusen rity. Although brought to Venice by a physician in 1591, it was only in 1652 that the first coffeehouse was established in London, and it only became fashionable in Paris in 1669, says the same authority. Eagland gradually forsook coffee for tea, but the progress of the beverage, though slower, was steadier

Until 1696, when the Dutch began to successfully grow coffee trees in Java from the Malibar (India) bean, all coffee came from Arabia. The coffee culture of the West Indies and Central and South America had its beginnings, It is said, in a slip taken from a tree in the botanic gardens at Paris, which been a resident of this place only a had obtained a vigorous growth from a cutting said to have been stolen from the botanic gardens at Amsterdam. All the plantations of the old and new world are practically derived from the specimens taken from Arabia, first to India, thence to Java and elsewhere.

ANTIQUE SEVRES.

You Can Always Distinguish the Genuine by Its Gilding.

False Sevres in the bric-a-brac shops is offered as genuine by "reputable dealers" in London and Paris as well as in New York. It is old, it is true, July 1---Union Services of all the but only as old as the "restoration" in France, although the marks would indicate a much earlier and better period. The counterfeits may usually be detected by the surface of the gilding. In the real it was burnished in lines by means of metal nails with rounded points, which were set in a piece of

The imitations of later date than the real have been burnished in a similar manner, but with an agate. It rewhile in the counterfeit ware they are duch with the general surface of the gilding.
