President Amador has decided that all the obnoxious Colombians said to be implicated in the plot shall be expelled from Panama.

Cashier of Chicago Defunct Bank Denies His Guilt.

Chicago, Aug. 10 .- Henry H. Hering, cashier of the Milwaukee Avenue State bank, which closed its doors Monday, was arrested yesterday and will be refused his release on bail until his connection with the disappearance of nearly $1,000,000 of the bank's funds is cleared up. Paul O. Stensland, president of the defunct institution, is still a fugitive, and, although nearly 100 detectives are searching for him, his whereabouts is as much of a mystery as ever.

Hering was arrested yesterday afternoon, two hours after the time he had previously promised he would give himself up. He was taken at once to the office of Chief of Police Collins and put through a thorough examination as to his knowledge of President Stensland's mismanagement of the institution. Hering declared he did not know where Stensland was and had had no communiciation with him for over a week. #### TO PURCHASE SILVER.

Government Enters Market for First Time in Thirteen Years.

Washnigton, Aug. 10 .- For the first time in 13 years the government announced today its purpose to purchase silver for coinage purposes. Tenders are invited at the office of the director of the mint in this city on Wednesday, August 15, up to 1 o'clock p. m., and every Wednesday thereafter until further notice. These tenders are to be for delivery at the Philadelphia, New Orleans or Denver mints, settlement to be on the New York basis of bullion guaranteed .999 fine. 'The treasury reserves the right to reject all tenders or accept such part of any tenders as may suit its convenience.

It is understood that, anticipating that its reappearance as a purchaser might temporarily disturb the market unduly, the treasury has obtained control of considerable amounts for furture delivery, so that it is in a position to drop out of the market for several months if desirable. #### Jerry's Imprisonment.

Little Jerry was staying with grandna. He liked the farm when mother was there; but when he had been sent there because mother was sick-then the shadows behind the barn looked decidedly dreary and the little chirping tree-toads under his window made a lonesome sound. He tried to be very brave and not to mind, but the days were long.

One afternoon he almost determined to run away home and tell mother all about it. He wondered if people cared the same when they were sick, and if she were able to take him on her knee and smooth it all out.

From thinking these things it presently seemed quite right to take the trip. He had found people so kind in and father is coming Saturdays, just the country that he was sure he would as he used to do. If you had gone London, Aug 10. - In a dispatch get a great many rides, and when he away you would have missed them." was within a dollar of Boston be could Jerry could only hide his face on take the train, for he had that amount grandmother's comfortable shoulder of money in his little leather purse. He sat under the maple-tree, planning Youth's Companion.

it all out, and the only thing that worried him was getting hungry; but he reasoned that if he stayed on the farm his grandmother would have to give him his food, and so if he took a certain amount in a box it would not be stealing.

When this was decided upon, there seemed nothing to be feared, and he went at once to the kitchen to see what be could find. He planned to start the next morning, and as he might not have an opportunity to take food then, ne decided to hide it in the barn.

He found an old box, and in it he placed two slices of bread, three doughnuts and a piece of cake. He also put in a small tin dipper that grandmother had given him to pick berries in. He crept out at the back door and found his way to the hay-loft. There was a long tunnel in the hay that he had built the day before, and into this he crawled and hid away the box. He was sure now of overcoming all obstacles, and so he thought he would enjoy himself. He began a play he knew very well-hunting for tigers in an African lungle. It is a pleasant game for lonely little boys, and a haymow is an excellent place to play it.

Jerry crawled farther away into the hay, and just as in imagination he was coming upon a tiger, he felt the hay settling beneath his feet, and he began to slide down-down. He called out, but no one heard, and when his feet at last came to the ground, he found himself in a small room that apparently had been once a stall. There was a rude sort of door, and against this he pushed with all his strength, but it refused to give way. He was terribly frightened, for he did not know how far he might be from the front of the barn, and he knew if he could not make his presence known he would be in a worse plight than feeling lonely in his neat little bed in the porch cham-

There was a small window high above his head, and with all his strength he called again and again. The shadows began to fall, and far away he heard the cattle come into the barn and distant rumbling of carts. After a time this died away, and all was still. He flung himself down on the rough boards and cried with all the bitterness of eight years.

It was a great many hours later when the sound of loud bell-ringing woke him, and there was the flash of lasterns in the small window. He knew then that they were looking for him, and he called out. This time he was heard, for the men were passing the back of the barn on their way to the wood.

It was not long before he was back in grandma's kitchen, sitting on her lan and telling her all about it, even about the box of food, and why it was hidden in the hav.

"That would have been too bad," said grandma, when she had heard how much better it seemed now to be on her knee than going back to the city, "because mother is coming to-morrow, and whisper many, many promises,

"THE WRETCHED BOYS."

Along with other enlightenments of the age, the genius Boy seems now to be better understood and appreciated than in the days of the colonies. The worthy advocates of the precept that 'children should be seen and not heard" were apt to forget that if young people were "heard" at proper seasons they were much more apt to be "seen" to advantage when occasion required. The boys of 1700 were no worse than those of to-day. What modern lad could sit through a two hours sermon without the aid of much wriggling and squirming and an occasional kick or two? W. R. Bliss, in his book on colonial meeting-houses, tells how the youthful portion of the congregation was regarded by our very greatgrandfathers. Certain laws, enacted in Massachusetts at the end of the struggle with King Philip, declared that the war was rudeness of youth in many congregations in time of the worship of God." John Elfot, pastor at Roxbury, evidently thought this a harsh charge to lay at the boys' door, for he expressed his opinion that they had nothing to ers are wearing gloves."-Philadelphia do with it, and that the war was a Press. judgment on the people for wearing

In 1666 John Dawes of Boston was empowered to take care of all young people "that are disorderly in time of God's Sollem worship" and to correct the unruly ones with a small wand. In 1723 John Pike was paid sixteen pounds for keeping "boys in subjection," in the time of service, for six months. When hired the second time he doubled his price.

On Cape Cod four men were appoint ed by a town to take care of the boys on the Lord's day, and to whip them if necessary. Such officers were termed "Inspectors of Youth." In Duxbury, as late as 1760, a committee was those do him.

en to look after "the wretched boys" on the Sabbath.

What did these colonial lads do to require such supervision? One almost shrinks from examining into their lawlessness. But the records reveal the depths of their iniquity. They did not stand up as their elders did for the long prayers, but sat with their bats on "during ye whole exercise." They ran out before the prayer was done and "ye Blessing pronounced." They were guilty of "Rude and Idel Behavor such as Smiling and Larfing and Intiseing others to the Same Evil;" of "Puling the heir of their naybers in time of publick Worship."

One's imagination might go on and add the paper balls and nutshells which were probably thrown from the gallerles where "the wretched boys" were imprisoned, the shaking of the benches, the sly pinches, and the similar ebullitions of youthful spirits which went to make up the sum total of colonial wick. edness.
