Seeking a Scholarship.

Miss Maud Hollinger of this city, has entered the Portland Journal's contest for a scholarship which that paper offers in any one of the many Oregon educational institutions she may choose. This paper has made arrangements with all the Oregon schools and is offering scholarships as prizes to ambitious students who wish to work their way through school. Aside from the scholarships the Journal is offering cash prizes so that the energetic contestants are almost certain of receiving ample compensation for their labors. Miss Hollinger is desirous of finishing her musical education at Pacific University and is, through this channel, making the effort to win. The News wishes her success, in fact we wish anyone else who might be entered from this section success. The Journal has undertaken this educational feature, which is one of the most laudable ones ever instituted by a newspaper in Oregon.

L. J. CORL & SON

Forest Grove, Oregon

Died

Julia A. Boyce, aged 71 and the wife of Davis Boyce, died last Saturday in Vancouver, Washington, after an illness of several months. Mrs. Boyce was one of the pioneer women of Oregon, having come to this state from Ohio in 1851, locating in Portland.

Her maiden name was Shepard and she was a sister of James Shepard who made Forest Grove his home for several years. Mrs. Boyce moved from Washington county about 25 years ago.

Mrs. Boyce leaves a husband and three children: Mrs. Cicero Hines of this city, Mrs. Severens and E. Boyce. The funeral services were held in Vancouver with interment Tuesday in the Buxton cemetery.

Wheelock Marsh, who returned from the Hawaiian Islands last Thursday reports a splendid sojourn in the tropics, and on the way to this country, he said the ship passengers celebrated the Fourth in grand style. F. says they had a Goddess of liberty that from point of beauty and grace, outstripped anything he ever saw on land, for the oration, it was the best on land or sea, for he made
