

AME EVERY MORNING

Bad Back Is Always Worse in the Morning. Forest Grove People are Finding Relief.

A back that aches all day and causes discomfort at night is usually worse in the morning. Makes you feel as if you hadn't slept at all. Can't cure a bad back until you reach the kidneys. Doan's Kidney Pills cure sick kidneys—make you feel better, work better, rest better and sleep better.

I. N. Ridgeway, with the Oregon Nursery Company and living at 253 Commercial St., Salem, Or., says: "I knew I had kidney trouble because there were pains in the small of my back and twinges when I stooped or lifted. Even at night the pains were still there and mornings I arose lame and sore. I tried easily and felt languid and was sometimes dreadfully nervous. Occasionally I had headaches and at such times my sight would be blurred. There was also a sediment in the secretions. My experience proved that Doan's Kidney Pills have no superior for curing kidney complaint and backache. They are just the thing every sufferer from these troubles should use. Nothing could have suited me better. They went right to the seat of the trouble and completely relieved me. Doan's Kidney Pills have my endorsement."

The Knock-out Blow.

The blow which knocked out Corbett as a revelation to the prize fighters, from the earliest days of the ring the knock-out blow was aimed for the jaw, the temple or the jugular vein. Stomach punches were thrown in to worry and weary the fighter, but if a scientific man had told one of the old fighters that the most vulnerable spot was the region of the stomach, he'd have laughed at him or an ignoramus. Dr. Pierce is bringing some to the public a parallel fact; that the stomach is the most vulnerable organ out of the prize ring as well as in it. We protect our heads, throats, feet and lungs, but the stomach we are utterly indifferent to, until disease finds the solar plexus and knocks us out. Make your stomach sound and strong by the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, and protect yourself in your most vulnerable spot. The Golden Medical Discovery cures "weak stomach," indigestion, or dyspepsia, torpid liver, bad, thin and impure blood and other diseases of the organs of digestion and nutrition.

The "Golden Medical Discovery" has a specific curative effect upon all mucous surfaces and hence cures catarrh, no matter where located or what stage it may have reached. In Nasal Catarrh it is well to cleanse the passages with Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy fluid while using the "Discovery" as a constitutional remedy. Why the "Golden Medical Discovery" cures catarrhal diseases, as of the stomach, bowels, bladder and other pelvic organs will be plain to you if you will read a booklet of extracts from the writings of eminent medical authorities, endorsing its ingredients and explaining their curative properties. It is mailed free on request. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y. This booklet gives all the ingredients entering into Dr. Pierce's medicines from which it will be seen that they contain not a drop of alcohol, pure, triple-refined glycerine being used instead. Dr. Pierce's great thousand-page illustrated Common Sense Medical Adviser will be sent free, paper-bound, for 21 stamp stamps, or cloth bound for 31 stamps. Address Dr. Pierce as above.

Two Innocents Abroad.

Push is indigenoüs to the Yankee race. That is what has made it the most prosperous race today on the face of the earth. The trait descends from father to son and from mother to daughter. Singularly enough, our British cousins, who carefully keep within the limits of their own classes, seem to like us—that is, the men do. The women consider our girls who go over there unblushingly forward.

Two American girls recently graduated, whom we shall designate as Susie and Annie, were sightseeing in an ancient British town. There was a twelfth century castle there in tolerable repair. At any rate, its owner, the Duke of G., lived there—that is, when he wasn't somewhere else, which he was the principal part of the time, for he was in politics and spent most of his time at the capital.

The girls sallied forth without escort and, dancing along through the narrow streets, their skirts fluttering in the wind like a pair of yachts "going about," presently found themselves at the castle entrance. The drawbridge was down, and the portcullis was up, so the two American girls concluded to storm the castle while the way was open. A man stood at the entrance.

"We would like to see the castle, if you please," said Annie, the spokeswoman.

"The castle is o-o-o-o"—He was trying to get out some word beginning with the letter o, but got stuck.

"We won't hurt anything," said the younger girl, Susie.

"I d-d-d"—This time he got stuck on the letter d.

At that moment a man, with an ax over his shoulder, passed by within the enclosure and, seeing two pretty girls, approached and asked if he could be of any service.

"We want to see the castle," said the spokeswoman. "If we wait till he tells us whether we can or not I'm afraid it will be too late."

The man smiled and said that he would show them the castle. Leaning his ax against a wall, he put on his coat, which he had carried on his arm, and led the way.

"I guess he's in charge when the duke's away," said the elder girl to the junior.

The inference was natural, for the man opened doors wherever he liked without knocking and took them everywhere, explaining as he proceeded.

"Quite a number. They were red ones. Their blood stained the walls."

"The perfume must have been delicious."

"This is the banquet hall," their guide continued, opening a door into an immense apartment around which were ranged dummies wearing armor. "The table reached from end to end."

"What did they eat in those days?"

"Oxen, hares, calves, deer—anything they could get. They were hard eaters, hard drinkers and hard fighters."

"You don't mean the dukes and their families, do you?"

"Oh, the dukes ate, drank and fought harder than any one else. They were an ignorant set. Scarcely any of them could read or write."

"Good gracious!"

"This part," the guide went on, "was sacked by the roundheads. Here was the chapel," opening a door. "They destroyed the altar and got away with the silver service."

"What kind of heads did you say they had?"

"Round—round as a bullet. Their trousers were always out at the knees."

"How did that happen?"

"Praying. They fought, prayed and sang psalms, all at the same time."

"Why did they attack the castle?"

"The duke was a cavalier."

"I thought cavaliers were very nice."

"They were beautiful lace collars and long curls, if that is nice."

When the inspection was finished and they returned to the starting point the man picked up his ax and bade the girls good morning. Annie, who carried a small box in her hand, said:

"Do you think the duke would object if I took a few views?"

"Certainly not."

She proposed to him to stand with his ax over his shoulder and be photographed, making a central figure for one of the views. He smiled and consented. Then, with thanks, the friends departed. The same afternoon they went to London and left their plates at a photographer to be developed. On calling for the proofs the photographer asked how they came to get the views and when told offered them £50 for the plate containing the ax man. Since this would give them a trip into Scotland, they accepted it.

While they were in Scotland the British cabinet was outvoted in the house of commons, and a new ministry was formed. One of the illustrated papers fell into the girls' hands, and a picture in it surprised them. It was a reproduction of their photograph of the ax man. Under it was printed in caps, "His grace the Duke of G., the new prime minister, returning from his daily exercise."

Annie looked at Susie, and Susie looked at Annie. Then Annie said:

"I think we'd better go home and take another year at school."

HUMOROUS

QUESTION OF PRIVILEGE.

The Harvard Professor and the Street Car Conductor.

A well known Harvard professor was one day traveling by trolley from Cambridge to Boston, where he desired to call upon a friend. He asked the conductor to transfer him to the city cars at a certain point.

Soon afterward the car stopped and the Harvard man, on looking out of the window, was surprised to see the very friend he was seeking. He started to leave the car, but the conductor stopped him.

"You can't change here," he said brusquely.

The professor passed him, making no response.

"You can't change here, I tell you," persisted the conductor.

By this time the professor was on the rear step. "Here, you old jay" exclaimed the conductor. "haven't I told you that you can't change here?"

At this the good man flushed. "Well, I can change my mind here, can't I?"—Lippincott's.

It Wouldn't Go Down.

It is often claimed that artists and scientists should not marry. A wife and family, the contention runs, divert a man's thoughts from pure art or pure science to money making, and in other ways besides they distract and constrain him.

Henry James, who is usually serious, defended the above claim rather frivolously at a dinner in New York on his last visit.

"For example," he said, "a friend of mine declared one night that he believed in study."

"Nobody can learn in a lifetime all that should be known," he said. "A man ought never to assume that his education is complete. I must and will keep abreast of the times, and I propose to begin the study of anatomy at once."

"Jerome," said his wife calmly, "you'll have to think of some better excuse than that for staying out to all hours of the night."—Buffalo Enquirer.

Manager's Gentle Hint.

"The last time I was in London," said Lloyd Bingham, "I called on a theatrical manager to make arrangements with him to star my wife."

"How much does your wife ask per week?" queried the manager.

"One thousand dollars," I replied.

"How much, may I ask," said the manager, "is that in English money?"

"About two hundred pounds," I said.

"I beg your pardon," said the manager, "but would you mind closing the door as you go out?"

Fatal Admission.

"What other qualifications have you for the place?" asked the merchant.

"Well," began the applicant, "my friends tell me I have a contented disposition and—"

"You won't do," replied the merchant. "We want a man with a discontented disposition—one that will hustle."—Catholic Standard and Times.

Enough in Itself.

"Charlie Softleigh is thinking"—"I'm glad to hear of that."—"But I hadn't told you of what he was thinking."—"No, but the mere knowledge that he was thinking made me glad."—Cleveland

The Publisher's Claims Sustained

UNITED STATES COURT OF CLAIMS

The Publishers of Webster's International Dictionary allege that it "is, in fact, the popular (unabridged) thoroughly re-edited in every detail, and vastly enriched in every part, with the purpose of adapting it to meet the larger and severer requirements of another generation."

We are of the opinion that this allegation most clearly and accurately describes the work that has been accomplished and the result that has been reached. The Dictionary, as it now stands, has been thoroughly re-edited in every detail, has been corrected in every part, and is admirably adapted to meet the larger and severer requirements of a generation which demands more of popular philological knowledge than any generation that the world has ever contained.

It is perhaps needless to add that we refer to the dictionary in our judicial work as of the highest authority in accuracy of definition; and that in the future as in the past it will be the source of constant reference.
