

IF WOMEN ONLY KNEW

What a Heap of Happiness It Would Bring to Forest Grove Homes.

Hard to do housework with an aching back.
Brings you hours of misery at leisure or at work.
If women only knew the cause—that Backache pains come from sick kidneys, 'Twould save much needless woe.
Doan's Kidney Pills cure sick kidneys.

Mrs. Mary Bumgarner, of 424 Water Street, Salem, Ore., says: "I have found Doan's Kidney Pills a remedy that is worthy of all confidence and am pleased to endorse them so that other sufferers from kidney complaint may know how to get relief. I procured Doan's Kidney Pills at a drug store and several members of our family have used them with the most gratifying results. I took them myself for a tired aching back and a dragging down feeling that comes from irregular and deranged kidneys. The results were the best. The aching pains were banished and the kidneys were rendered normal. My health became better in every way."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doans—and take no other.

Bad Symptoms.

The woman who has periodical headaches, backache, sees imaginary dark spots or specks floating or dancing before her eyes, has a gnawing distress or heavy full feeling of stomach, faint spells, dragging-down feeling in lower abdominal or pelvic region, easily startled or excited, irregular or painful periods, with or without pelvic catarrh, is suffering from weakness and derangements that should have early attention. Not all of above symptoms are likely to be present in any case at one time.

Neglected or badly treated and such cases often run into maladies which demand the surgeon's knife if they do not respond to medicine.

No medicine extant has such a long and numerous record of cures in such cases as Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. No medicine has such a strong reputation for its effectiveness in curing the various derangements of the female system, the very best ingredients known to medical science for the cure of woman's peculiar ailments enter into its composition. No alcohol, harmful, or habit-forming drug is to be found in the list of its ingredients printed on each bottle wrapper and stated under oath.

In any condition of the female system, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription can do only good—never harm. Its whole effect is to strengthen, invigorate and regulate the whole female system and especially the pelvic organs. When these are deranged in function or affected by disease, the stomach and other organs of digestion become sympathetically deranged, the nerves are weakened, and a long list of bad, unpleasant symptoms follow. Too much must not be expected of this "Favorite Prescription." It will not perform miracles; will not cure cancer, and it will not cure syphilis. It will often prevent them, if taken in time, and thus the operating table and the surgeon's knife may be avoided.

Women suffering from diseases of long standing, are invited to consult Doctor Pierce by letter, free. All correspondence is held as strictly private and sacredly confidential. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

Dr. Pierce's Medical Advertiser (1000 pages) is sent free on receipt of 21 one-cent stamps for paper-covered, or 31 stamps for cloth-bound copy. Address as above.

LITERARY LOG ROLLING.

How Some Famous Authors Sought to Advertise Themselves.

The examples cited by Francis Gribble in his article on "The Comedy of Literary Log Rolling" in the Strand Magazine arouse some suspicion as to their absolute authenticity, but are amusing enough whether true or not. Sainte-Beuve increased the circulation of his books by insisting upon fighting a duel in the rain with an umbrella over his head. Gerard de Nerval used to be seen in the streets of Paris leading a lobster by a string. Mme. Krudener, the author of "Valerie" and the friend of Alexander I. of Russia, made the fortune of her novel by calling at all the Paris shops and asking for various articles of dress "a la Valerie."

Of Victor Hugo and of Alexandre Dumas the elder the following stories are told:
Nor was the great poet ashamed to roll his log even at a funeral. He seized the opportunity at the obsequies of one of his own sons. It happened that on the way to the cemetery the procession passed a traveling menagerie, and the lions, for whatever reason, stopped roaring just as Victor Hugo was in front of their cage. His companion, a minor poet named Pelleport, drew his attention to the fact. "Master," he whispered, "the lions recognize you and hush their voices. The king of beasts is silent in the presence of the king of men." Victor Hugo bowed and turned the matter over in his mind. Then, after meditation, he said: "Pelleport, that was a happy thought of yours. Couldn't you write something about it?" And Pelleport wrote a sonnet about it, and the fame of the master stood on a higher pinnacle than ever.

And finally there was the case of Dumas, of whom it may almost be said that his whole life was an advertisement. Some one once said of him that his vanity was such that he was capable of getting up behind his own carriage in order to demonstrate that he had a negro footman in his service. He certainly did many things almost as absurd as that in his restless pursuit of reclame. One of his delights was to clothe his noble proportions in a uniform and to embellish the uniform with decorations to which he was not entitled. He even went so far as himself to design the uniform in which he fought—or, rather, did not fight, for he arrived after the fighting was all over—in Garibaldi's army, and he achieved a tremendous advertisement by conducting a well known actress to a court ball to which she had not been invited. He got another advertisement by allowing himself to be sued for non-delivery of a feuilleton. He was utterly in the wrong, and he lost his case, but he kept the court in roars of laughter while he explained his literary methods and the nature of the distractions which had interfered with the fulfillment of his contract. But the best of all his advertisements was attained when the announcement appeared that M. Alexandre Dumas would write the last chapter of a forthcoming romance sitting in a shop window, for all the world to see how it was done. One can understand that that sort of advertisement would suit the authors who are also interested in the sale of hair restorers. They almost owe it to the public to exhibit themselves in this way, killing two birds with a single stone. But for the author of "Monte Cristo" to do it was surely the ne plus ultra of the comedy of log rolling.

The general shuddered. Riding in front of their line meant certain death. "This is suicide," he protested. "Come on," said the colonel. Putting spurs to his horse, Reckling started straight toward the enemy's lines. At the same moment a storm of bullets whistled by the two men. Hunkins could not stand the test. He turned and rode back as fast as his horse could carry him. Bravery wins respect even from an enemy. The Confederates, wondering, watched Reckling coming. Presently he turned and rode slowly toward the front of their line. Not a shot was fired. It was an eighth of a mile to cover, and as the soldier passed over the distance and entered the wood a cheer went up from the Union soldiers and the Confederates, who were too admiring to shoot so gallant a man.

When the general joined his escort he knew that his military career had ended. But his aptitude for a different field saved him in that field. He sent home one of his henchmen, who was serving on his staff, with instructions to write up the general's remarkable service in the army and create a demand among the people that he return and run for congress. The henchman played his part well, and just as the singular duel between Hunkins and Reckling came to the ears of the general commanding the army corps in which the duellists served Hunkins forwarded his resignation. It was accepted, and Hunkins returned to the field for which he was best fitted and made an eminently successful campaign.

Reckling was made a brigadier general and placed in command of the division. He was soon promoted for gallantry to a higher rank and command. He ended his career, not in a political campaign, but supporting old "Pop" Thomas on the field of Chickamauga.

much extra will it cost?"
"Not a cent," the dealer assured her. "In the case of any important sale we prefer that one of our men superintend the hanging of the picture. That insures justice for the painting. Without meaning any disrespect for our customers, I must say that not one person in a hundred who has had no special instruction in art can take a picture home and place it in an advantageous position. A man who has been trained to that business, on the other hand, can tell at a glance where to hang it and all the others in the room so that each will bring out the best points of all the rest."—New York Sun.

Seaweed For Hats.
Everything upon land that could possibly be utilized has been put upon the season's millinery, and now, earthly suggestions having been exhausted, the sea has been levied upon and with great success. Seaweed as trimming has proved its efficiency, and many of the imported creations show the clever treatment of those plants of the ocean.

The most satisfactory seaweed for millinery purposes is that found near the mouth of the Thames on the English coast, and the season for procuring it lasts from October until April, the harvest occupying the time of the poorer population of the Isle of Guerne.

After a high northern wind one gatherer has been known to pick up as much as a hundredweight in one day. Again, with adverse tides and gales, there is no harvest for days at a time. Seaweed, of course, is very light in weight, and when dried and cleaned one pound represents a considerable bundle.

It is used for other purposes besides hats, as it is used in large quantities for table and room decorations, although its highly inflammable qualities make it wise to keep it away from lights.

The thoroughly trained English servant is in his way the most perfect kind of servant to be found anywhere, and in his station and for his duties he is not to be matched in the world. Where will you find any men so competent in their work, so completely trained and apparently emotionless in manner, so punctual, so clean, so smart, as an English butler, coachman, footman or valet? Certainly not on the continent of Europe, in the United States, in Canada or in Australia.—Country Life.

Metals and Metaphors.
"It is most amazing," said a metallurgist, "how the world relies on metals for its metaphors and similes. Thus an orator is silver tongued or golden mouthed. An explorer is bronzed by African suns. A resolute chap has an iron will. A sluggard moves with leaden feet. An ostrich has a copper lined stomach. A millionaire has tin. A swindler is as slippery as quicksilver. A borrower has brass."—New York Press.

Close Figuring at the Boarding House.

A PORTABLE STOVE.

The Latest Boon to the House-keeper and Automobilist.

DENATURED ALCOHOL IS USED

The New Stove is No Use For Heating Purposes—it is Intended For Cooking Only—it Can Be Packed in a Suit Case With Plenty of Extra Room.

The very latest boon to the house-keeper comes in the shape of a portable stove that fills so many long felt wants in the culinary department that it is difficult to know where to begin in enumerating them. This portable blessing follows naturally the introduction of denatured alcohol into the kitchen. It is so light that a child can carry it. It is absolutely safe to handle, and it burns with the obliging readiness of a gas stove without the objection of being a fixture to the source of supply.

The stove can be prepared for cooking purposes in a very few moments. At the top, above the two burners, there is a reservoir holding a quart of alcohol. The material is put up in quart bottles, just enough to fill the reservoir.

The alcohol is poured into the reservoir, and then by turning one of the handles in front of the stove the liquid is released, to run down into a dish underneath the burner. When the little dish is filled with the liquid the alcohol in it is set alight. It burns with a gentle flame until entirely consumed.

THE FIRST THING TO DO IS TO FILL THIS RESERVOIR.

The heat from this source acts upon the supply in the reservoir, vaporizing this and setting free the supply of gas for cooking purposes.

After this little preliminary operation the gas is set to work just as with a regular illuminating gas stove, by turning the tap and allowing the vapor to escape through the burners. A match sets it alight, and the stove is immediately bubbling over with eagerness to help in the family cooking. The gas is turned off in the same way. There is no danger at all of explosion at any stage of the process.

The new stove is no use for heating purposes. It is intended for cooking only. Its advantages besides the one of providing a stove that is readily manipulated is that it can be carried with ease to any place where the cooking operation is to be performed. For picnic parties this stove will be invaluable. It can be packed in a suit case, with plenty of space to spare, and when the rendezvous is reached it can be put into commission in less time than it takes to gather wood for a gypsy fire. It can be used on board the launches and catboats that are popular for summer parties and will make motorists serenely independent of wayside lunch houses.—Philadelphia Press.

A TURN OF THE HANDLE RELEASES THE ALCOHOL.

The glove handkerchiefs are very small and are edged with lace. They are tiny enough to tuck in the glove and are most elaborate in design. A bride whose penchant is pretty handkerchiefs has nearly a hundred, all worked in various ways. They are of lawn, lace, pongee, silk and cotton. And they are in all colors and in many kinds of stripes and plaids. They are in three sizes—the tiny glove mouchoir, the handkerchief for the drawing room, and the larger one for the street gown.

Headache Cure.
One of the quickest known ways of dispelling headache is to give some of the muscles—those in the legs, for instance—a little hard, sharp work to do. The reason is obvious. Muscular exertion flushes the parts engaged in it and so depletes the brain. When your head aches take a stiff walk or a short bicycle ride.

The truest mark of being born with great qualities is being born without envy.—Rocheboucaud.
