

DAYS OF DIZZINESS

Come to Hundreds of Forest Grove People.

There are days of dizziness; Spells of headache, sideache, backache; Sometimes rheumatic pains; Often urinary disorders. All tell you plainly the kidneys are sick.

Dr. S. Daily, living on Second Ave., Forest Grove, Ore., says: "For over ten years I suffered from kidney trouble and no matter how many remedies I tried, I was unable to find relief. My kidneys were in a much disordered condition, the secretions too frequent in action and greatly interfered with my rest at night. I did not feed severely from dizzy spells and my eyesight became affected. I grew weak and at the time Doan's Kidney Pills were brought to my attention, I was feeling very miserable. I received good results from the use, continued taking them and at the present time am absolutely free from any sign of kidney complaint. I give Doan's Kidney Pills credit for the great change in my condition."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States.

Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other.

Settled Out of Court.

(Original.) "Marry him, madam," said the attorney. "There's no other way out of the difficulty."

"Marry that old rascal? Never! But, supposing I should consent to your plan, how could I marry a man with whom I have had legal quarrels for years?"

"Any woman is more than a match for man, especially for a supernumerary man. Let me see. You are forty-five. Bless me, you don't look it! He is thirty years your senior. He'll not live long."

Mrs. Peabody promised to think of the matter and was not long in taking the attorney's advice. She wrote old Codman a letter, which she showed to her niece, Elizabeth Ward, who lived with her, but the girl told her that it was too cold, matter of fact and generally unromantic, whereupon the elderly woman charged her niece to write such a letter as she would herself send to a man she admired. The result was an epistle that warmed old Ephraim Codman from the tips of his toes to the crown of his hairless head. There was no business in it, but it tended to bring about a conclusion of the lawsuit. The letter was handed with the morning's mail to Mr. Codman by his grandson and heir, Louis, who acted as his secretary. Louis opened all letters before submitting them. Indeed, he read Mrs. Peabody's to his grandfather, whose slight was inadequate to decipher a woman's handwriting. The old man, fearing that a matrimonial alliance might not please his heir, undertook to make the reply himself, but Louis intercepted the reply and sent one that he had written himself. For reasons of his own he poured out just such words as he would write to his own ladylove.

Then followed a correspondence that would warm hearts frozen for centuries. Miss Ward would write Mrs. Peabody's letters, read them to her aunt for approval and mail them. "The old fool," the lady would exclaim, "to be caught by such chaff! It's lucky, Betty, I have you to write these letters. I never could do it in the world." Then when the replies arrived it would be: "How sickening! I wonder if he will expect me to listen to that rubbish when we are married? However, he will pay well for the privilege. He is sure to win his case in the end, and that will bankrupt us; whereas this marriage will make us rich. You'll be well paid for your letter writing, Betty. I shall settle $100 a year on you for dress."

"How generous you are, auntie! You are always thinking of others; never of yourself."

And so the correspondence went on, growing warmer the while, till at last there came a proposition of marriage. In it was nothing of the business proposition Mrs. Peabody had intended to call forth, but an ardent love such as a young man would pour out to a young girl. "I shall love you," the old man said, "in your youth and cherish you in your old age." The lady threw down the letters, muttering: "Not in my old age, you old fool! You'll be under ground twenty years before I'm an old woman!"

When Miss Ward handed her aunt the reply she had written Mrs. Peabody commented on it. "If he were a young man, Bett, it would be lovely. There's some excuse for him, after all, considering how sweetly you write."

Then came the arrangements for the first meeting between the principals, who had never met except in court, where they had glared at each other. Mr. Codman wrote that he would call at 11 in the morning of a certain day, and since he was subject to a temporary indisposition his grandson would accompany him.

"Temporary indisposition!" exclaimed Mrs. Peabody. "He'll bring his grandson to hold him up! Write him that owing to a superabundance of maidenly modesty I shall have my niece with me at the meeting."

The girl, laughing merrily, flew away to write the last letter of this unique correspondence before an engagement, and Mrs. Peabody went to her room to prepare for the ordeal.

When Mr. Codman's carriage drove up to Mrs. Peabody's door the sun was shining, the birds were singing—indeed, everything portended a betrothal of a youthful pair. Louis Codman alighted, got his grandfather out of the carriage and supported him into the house. Mrs. Peabody and her niece received them in the drawing room. The old man was trying to say something gallant when his grandson interrupted him.

"Grandfather," said he, "permit me, I am about to make an announcement to you and Mrs. Peabody jointly. When Mrs. Peabody's first letter came I recognized in it the genuine freshness of a young girl. I answered it for its recipient in the same strain. Miss Elizabeth Peabody and I have been corresponding over the heads of our elders, we have exchanged likenesses and have frequently met. The proposition is to unite the separate interests now pending. I have a few days ago secured an order from the court of chancery placing the management of the Codman estates in my hands on account of the failing health of my grandfather. If the matter is to be settled out of court it must be settled with me. Mrs. Peabody, I have the honor to ask the hand of your niece in marriage."

The old man cast a feeble inquiring glance at his grandson, and Mrs. Peabody uttered an exclamation of relief. "With all my heart," she exclaimed. The septuagenarian cast another feeble glance at his grandson and, placing his hand on his heart, said: "Mine too!"

During this Month.

During September and October, 1907, tickets will be on sale daily from all principal cities of the United States to all points in Oregon, Washington and Idaho on the lines of The Oregon Railroad & Navigation Company and Southern Pacific Company. From Chicago the rate is only $33 and from all Missouri river points $25. If you have a relative or friend who is thinking of coming west he should do so at once as the rates are in effect only during this month. By a system in general use among railroads the cost of a ticket can be deposited at pleasure with any local ticket agent in Oregon or elsewhere, and the necessary ticket will be furnished promptly in compliance with telegraphic instructions to the person for whom desired in any part of the East.

This enables residents of the Northwest to send for relatives, friends or employees in any part of the East without the inconvenience and delay of correspondence. The local ticket agent with whom the deposit is made will attend to all details.

HOWE'S OBSERVATIONS.

After all, people keep a pretty stiff upper lip.

How some women love to say my "my property."

Better make excuses than throw the blame on someone else.

It is every boy's opinion that when he earns a reward, his sister gets it.

So many things should be done that we haven't time to enumerate them.

A man who tries to work up popularity nearly always winds up a loser.

There may be health and leisure in the simple life, but there isn't any good housekeeping.

Put a ring in your nose, and a woman will not notice it if she has her children with her.

About the only thing that can be said in favor of store teeth is that they are better than none.

How the roosters are catching is now! Wherever you go these days, you have fried rooster to eat.

If a man gets in the list of "also ran" these swift days, he is doing pretty well.

"These new theologians" said an old-fashioned preacher lately, "have managed to fix up a pretty comfortable hell."

A man who will go away to a strange town and abuse his home town would criticize his mother to a book agent.

Every once in a while a man admits that this seems to be his week for doing foolish things; he could claim it truthfully fifty-two weeks in a year.
