Early Reminiscences of P. U.

BY JOS. W. MARSH

The college work in Pacific University forty years ago was not provided with the facilities which it now has. The building now used as the science building stood where Marsh Hall now stands, and the building which stood south of the district school and was burned not long ago, then stood where the district school now stands. This had been used as a preparatory school for boys and as a seminary for girls. The larger boys had recited at the college building. The first year of my teaching here, '67-'68, was in the seminary building, as it was called.

What is now used as the Academy building was then in the lower story used for students' rooms, the upper story being unfinished. About '73

A MEASURE OF MERIT

Forest Grove Citizens Should Weigh Well This Evidence

Proof of merit lies in the evidence. Convincing evidence in Forest Grove is not the testimony of strangers, but the endorsement of Forest Grove people.

That's the kind of proof given here--The statement of a Forest Grove citizen.

Lancel E. Bullock, living on Fourth St., Forest Grove, Ore., says: "For a number of years I suffered agonies from kidney and bladder trouble and it seemed that I had every symptom of the complaint imaginable. I had a constant desire to pass the secretions which were dark and contained a heavy sediment, when allowed to stand, the pains in my back were so severe that I was unable to rest well at night and in the morning I would feel tired and worn out. I suffered severely from dizzy spells and was in a generally miserable condition. I tried a number of remedies, also used plasters, but nothing seemed to reach my case. I finally heard of Doan's Kidney Pills and procured a box at a drug store. I found the contents of this box, and now am feeling as well as I ever hope to. My kidneys are now regular in action and I can go to bed and get a refreshing rest, something that I had not been able to do before in a number of years. It gives me the greatest pleasure to give Doan's Kidney Pills my endorsement."

Remember the name--Doan's--and take no other.

the building "across the swale" was sold to the district and the Academy building was fitted up for school use. Professor Collier came here in 1866, a year before me. During '67-'68 Pres't Marsh, Prof. Collier and myself were the teachers, receiving some assistance from the ladies who were then pursuing college studies, Misses Neal, Clark and Brown, now Mrs. Luce, Mrs. Davis and Mrs. Bowlby, all of whom graduated in 1870. Prof. Horace Lyman, who had had a year's leave of absence, returned in '68. Prof. Powell, afterwards State Supt., came as Principal of the Academy and after two years was succeeded by A. J. Anderson, one of the most enthusiastic teachers I ever knew.

Co-education has been established here since '67, tho previously there had been some objection to it. The block where Mrs. Rogers now lives had been once set apart by the trustees as the site of a Ladies Seminary.

A very good foundation for the Library was laid at an early time by Dr. Atkinson, and Dr. Marsh made a large addition to it when he came. In '67 only a few of the blocks in town were fenced. Pigs, as well as cows, were roaming everywhere and the pest of fleas was very trying. We had no meat market, only two or three stores and a blacksmith shop. The post-office stood about where Abbott's store is. A few of the earlier log houses were still standing, tho not in use except as barns or sheds.

Notwithstanding the deficiencies in the way of apparatus and the small number of teachers, the faithful scholars did very successful work and many went out to take prominent and useful places in society. It is always the man or the woman of character and resolution who wins. Without these our present facilities or even larger ones will be of little avail.

Turkey in American Sentiment

FRANCES BENTON CLAPP

It is sometimes said that the American people are so absorbed in their busy, hurrying life that they have lost all feelings of pure sentiment. Perhaps no time is more fitting to refute this statement than when the whole country is in joyous preparation for our national Thanksgiving. And what is Thanksgiving, if not the day on which we all with one accord unite to honor our American fowl, the Turkey? Can there be a higher form of sentiment than this? For this is a universal and delicate tribute to the lordly bird of our western continent.

Nor as Americans do we need fear comparison with other countries. It is true that the Ancient Greeks and Romans immortalized their birds of omen in the classic measures of the Iliad and Aeneid; that the love of the Englishman for his skylark has sung itself into his noblest poems; and that even the phlegmatic German has evinced his affection for the tiny linnet which throng his trees.

But our own countryman! How differently does he regard the great American bird, no foaming of other shores, but the ancient lord of his native wilds and fastnesses. We have only to recall the eager anticipations of childhood, or the happy memories of old age, which cluster around Thanksgiving day, to know how incorporated into national sentiment is the turkey.

With what mingled emotions do we draw round the table and watch the carver as he deftly runs his knife across the body of the great bird! And these emotions may even assume a national character. How touchingly expressed were those feelings of admiration and loyalty which prompted the Thanksgiving gift to President Roosevelt of a great white turkey--forty-two pounds of embodied sentiment!

The very presence of the glorious bird upon the festive board tends to elevate the thought above mere material and to throw a halo of idealism around hard realities.

At this season the thinnest purse strives to compass the desired fowl, and who will not scorn the fat and tender chicken if he can read his title clear to the smallest and most emaciated of turkeys. Toughness has no terrors for him who looks beyond mere skin and bones to the individual happiness and national prosperity symbolized.

If the road to a man's heart has been properly located then upon what a royal highway does our feathered friend travel to the affections of the American public. Long live the Turkey!

Simple Home-Made Treatment Said to Overcome Rheumatism.

When an eminent authority announced in the Scranton (Pa.) Times that he had found a new way to treat that dread American disease, Rheumatism, with just common, every-day drugs found in any drug store, the physicians were slow indeed to attach much importance to his claims. This was only a few months ago. Today nearly every newspaper in the country, even the metropolitan dailies, is announcing it and the splendid results achieved. It is so simple that any one can prepare it at home at small cost.

It is made up as follows: Get from any good prescription pharmacy Fluid Extract Dandelion, one-half ounce; Compound Kargon one ounce; Compound Syrup Sarsaparilla, three ounces. Mix by shaking in a bottle and take in teaspoonful doses after each meal and at bedtime. These are all simple ingredients, making an absolutely harmless home remedy at little cost.

Rheumatism, as every one knows, is a symptom of deranged kidneys. It is a condition produced by the failure of the kidneys to properly filter or strain from the blood the uric acid and other matter, which if not eradicated, either in the urine or through the skin pores, remains in the blood, decomposes and forms about the joints and muscles, causing the untold suffering and deformity of Rheumatism.

This prescription is said to be a splendid healing, cleansing and invigorating tonic to the kidneys, and gives almost immediate relief in all forms of bladder and urinary troubles and backache. He also warns people in a leading New York paper against the discriminate use of many patent medicines.
