Big Tips For Little Favors.

"It is surprising," said a veteran Pullman porter, "how big a tip a porter sometimes gets for doing a very little thing." He added:

"A passenger once tipped me extra because he said I did not leave his shoestrings colled up inside his shoes after 1 had blacked them. He said nothing made him madder than to slip on his shoes in a hurry in a sleeper only to find that he had to take them off again because the shoestrings were inside. Ever since that time I have been careful not to leave shoestrings inside of the shoes I black, and more than one passenger has thanked me for being thoughtful. But it wasn't me that did the thinking. The tip did that for me, and I never forgot it."-Leslie's Weekly.

A FRONTIER MARKSMAN.

Wild Bill Hickok's Skill In Use of the Six Shooter.

Wild Bill Hickok was the first frontiersman who recognized the importance of proficiency in the use of the six shooter. This was the real secret of his supremacy. He was an unerring marksman and shot as accurately under fire as when firing at a mark, apparently taking no aim.

Probably no man has ever equaled him in the lightning-like rapidity with which he could draw a weapon in time of emergency and in the thorough self possession that made it possible for him to take advantage of every opportunity in savage conflict. He had a standing order to his deputies that they should not rush in on him in any of his affrays and especially should not come quickly up in the rear.

By forgetting this a man named Willlams met his death at Abilene, Hickok taking him for an enemy and firing so rapidly that it left no opportunity for recognition. He readily killed a wild goose across the Smoky Hill with his revolver. Riding at his horse's highest speed, he fired shot after shot into a tin can or a post a few rods distant. Standing at one telegraph pole, he would swing rapidly on his heel and fire a pistol ball into the next telegraph pole. These were some of the simpler feats he performed day after day on the street to settle little wagers. He could shoot a hole through a silver dime at fifty paces and could drive the cork through the neck of a bottle at thirty paces and knock out the bottom without breaking the neck. He could do what the fancy shots of the present day do, and possibly some of them equal him as marksman with a revolver, but it must be remembered that he was the first to acquire the skill, and the so called crack shots of his day were poor imitations at best, although most of them boasted of their fame.

He shot just as well with others shooting at him and at a man as steadlly as at any other target. There were certain traits of his character, however, that were almost womanly. He was fond of children, and they liked him. He declined to quarrel with the peaceful settlers of the community, the business men, on any provocation. There was no foolhardy bravado about him. -Denver Field and Farm.

CONJURED A TREATY.

How Houdin, the Magician, Awed the Arabs Into Submission.

During the French conquest of Al geria (1830-3) negotiations for peace were entered upon with the sheiks of certain Arab tribes, and a meeting for the settlement of terms was arranged to take place at the French headquar-The French officers received ters. their guests with great hospitality, and after the banquet given in their honor, at which the utmost splendor was employed in order to dazzle their eyes and captivate their simple minds, an adjournment was made to a large hall. where M. Houdin, the celebrated conjurer, who had accompanied the French forces, gave an exhibition of his skill. They stared in open mouthed wonder at all the tricks that were performed, and a feeling of awe crept over them as they witnessed the mysterious appearance and disappearance of various objects. But what appeared to them most marvelous was the apparent manufacture of cannon balls. M. Houdin passed round among them a high hat, which they examined very carefully, but without suspecting anything unusual in either its make or its apnearance. When the hat was returned to him the conjurer placed it on the floor in the middle of the stage in full view of his audience. He then proceeded to take from the hat cannon balls apparently without number and rolled them across the floor into the wings With this the performance terminated. The chiefs then consulted among themselves and came to the conclusion that It was useless to offer any opposition to an army that could turn out its ammunition in so easy a manner. They therefore signed the required treaty and departed to tell their friends

It Proved Too Absorbing For Old Uncle Juniper.

The Mississippi courtroom was packed with negroes, and it was fairly evident, says a contributor to the Taylor-Trotwood Magazine, that something of anusual interest was about to transpire. Within the bar on the prisoner's seat an old negro leaned eagerly forward as his attorney ar- papers, he read every word, including gued his plea of not guilty before the jury

"Who, gentlemen of the jury, has sworn that he saw this man commit this theft?" demanded the attorney. "We have broken every link in the weak chain of circumstantial evidence tangle him. Why, his neighbor, Tom Jones, swore that he sold him the meat that was found in the defendant's house and that he shot the hog artistic pattern in a secondhand furbecause it was wild.

"It is true that Colonel Smith swore that one of his hogs disappeared about Dec. 23 and that about fifty yards from a certain stump he found blood that spot to this defendant's cabin. But what of that?

wife and brother swore the same-that was on it, or the remains of one, as that was the blood of a coon which he follows: had shot and carried home the day before Smith lost his hog. Give him justice as you would do if he were a white man. He cannot help being black. 'The leopard cannot change his spots nor the Ethiopian his skin.' For twenty years he has been a leader in the church. Let him remain free to enjoy the bread of life with others of the faithful."

As the lawyer sat down the women, who had been "weaving" back and forth for some minutes, commenced to shout:

"Bress de Lawd!"

"Dar, now!" "We knows yo's innocent, Br'er Juniper!"

The sheriff had to threaten to clear the courtroom before order was restored. When at last there was silence the district attorney rose,

"Gentlemen of the jury," he began In closing the case for the state, "I desire only to bring a picture to your minds."

Here the prisoner adjusted his big brass rimmed spectacles as if to see the picture, and his manner showed that he was determined to let no detail escape him.

"The 23d of last December," continued the district attorney, "found Juniper Bradley without meat. His son was coming to spend Christmas with him. But Juniper did not worry, for only half a mile away in Marse Smith's woods were some fat hogs.

"An hour before sunset Juniper was kneeling behind a large stump in these woods, with his rifle pointing toward a hog that at some distance away was rooting among the leaves."

The district attorney paused. Taking a cane to represent a rifle, he knelt behind a chair. After some minutes of moving to right and left, now raising, now lowering his rifle, he took careful aim and then fired, imitating the noise of a report very successfully.

At the sound Juniper, who had been smilling, apparently oblivious to everything save the district attorney's movements, exclaimed:

"Yas, suh, dat's des de way I done hit, boss!"

MANGOLD NO. 1142 ****** An Artist's Search.

[Original.] Mark Hammoud, American artist in Paris, was lounging one morning after breakfast in his studio before beginning his day's work. He had received a newspaper from home and, as was usual with him on the receipt of home advertisements. Suddenly he started. His eye had lighted on the following advertisement:

If Marcelline Elanche Cutter will com-municate with Griffin, Hastings & L'am, Temple court. New York city, she will hear something to her advantage.

Now, there was an especial reason with which the state has tried to en- why Mr. Hammond should be moved by this advertisement. Some month before he had needed a table for his studio and had purchased one of an niture shop. There was a drawer in it, but no key. For awhile the purchaser was content to let the drawer remain closed; but, finally needing it, he fitted a key and opened it. It conand then followed a trail of blood from | tained a few old papers so eaten by mice that he could make nothing of them. Hammond threw the contents of the drawer into a wastebasket, but the same evening, needing a bookmark, he took out the envelope for the purpose and used it till he had finished the book, leaving the envelope in the last place marked. The name Marcelline is an unusual one, and Hammond had for accidents. had it before him for a matter of ten days. He dropped the paper he had been reading and reached for the book. There was the envelope with the incomplete name and address. What was left of the address was plain except the first, a sole remaining letter giving the name of the street. It is printed here as a C, but there was that on its lower end to suggest that it might be something else.

Hammond was interested. Neverthe less it was the hour when, fresh after a night's sleep, he did his best work, and he took up his palette and brushes. In ten minutes he threw them down, took his hat and went out to find a

Hammond muttered something about the fool killer taking him and went back to his work. This time he succeeded in remaining at his easel till his breakfast (luncheon in Amerlea), after which he began a hunt that took up all his leisure time for weeks. Having made a list of all the streets

Philosophy when superficially studied excites doubt; when thoroughly explored, it dispels it.-Bacon.

Hammond knew his search was ended. Mother and daughter had lived where he found them for years. The daughter worked in a bookbindery away, and without forgiveness. Marwidow and daughter penniless. Mrs. Cutter was at a loss to know why she was inquired for. It could not be for an inheritance, for she knew of no relative who had means to bequeath her. The advertisement emanating from America indicated that she was sought for by the Seymours rather than the Cutters.

Hammond left the two to send their address to New York and settled down again to his work. A month passed, when there was a rap on his studio door, and two ladies entered. Beneath their altered dress he recognized the Cutters. Then they gave him the sequel to his search. Edgar Cutter had a brother Hugh, who had worked his way from England to Colorado. There he prospected, mined, struck a bonauza and became very rich. He hunted for his brother, but could gain no trace of him except that he had married Marcelline Seymour. Dying childless, Hugh Cutter left his property to his brother and his brother's wife and children, if any, on condition that they were found within a year after his own demise. If not the property was to go to his cousin, a resident of the place in England where the family had long lived. The year would have expired within six weeks after the date on which Hammond began his search.

Mrs. Cutter begged Hammond to name some way by which she might recompense him for his trouble and reward him for saving her and her daughter a splendid inheritance. Hammond, though but a poor artist struggling to paint pictures worthy to be hung in the Salon, declined to accept any compensation. He, however, de elded to return to America with the Cutters and on arrival there was persunded to go with them to Colorado and become active in securing their inheritance. He finally accepted a considerable reward in the person of Mabel Cutter, whom he married.
