

Y. W. C. A.

The meeting last Tuesday evening held by Miss Farnham, closed the series of special papers, which have been very helpful and interesting. Miss Farnham spoke upon the subject "Oriental Arts and Handicrafts." The meeting was one of the very best the association has had this year, although the attendance was not as large as desired.

Miss Farnham spoke of the Oriental people and their ideas; also the influences that made their arts so characteristic of the people themselves. She then gave an intensely interesting description of the art of rug weaving as it is practiced in Persia and Arabia. Some of the beautiful rugs have been years in the making and command almost fabulous prices.

Miss Farnham also spoke of the carving and beaten brass work of the Chinese and natives of India. As illustrations she showed several articles, which had been loaned by Mrs. Rogers. Some of these were remarkable in the skill of workmanship which they displayed. Perhaps the most interesting were a beaten brass bowl from India, a sandal wood box and two carved peach stones from China, and some lacquered ware from Japan. Those present regretted that more time could not be given to the study of this subject which Miss Farnham made so fascinating.

Special Exercises Wednesday.

The special chapel exercises last Wednesday consisted of two selections given by students of the Public Speaking Department. The first a story entitled "Charles Stuart and the Burglar," was given by Miss Grace Payne. Miss Payne's rendition was very good and she won the sympathy of her audience with her portrayal of the young hero in his exciting experience with a burglar who really wasn't so bad after all.

The other selection "His Journey to the Gates," was given by Miss Esther Silverman. This is one of those charming stories in which the Pettison Twins play a prominent part. Rex has a bad case of scarlet fever and while ill tests the strength of maternal discipline which has become a source of dread to him. His mother yields only to become sterner as Rex grows better.

Miss Silverman is one of the advanced students in this department and her reading showed her careful thought and preparation.

Mrs. Cook returned the latter part of the week from her visit with Miss Hartley in Hood River.

Mr. H. E. Ferrin will not leave for Seaside until Friday or Saturday.

Miss Florence Templeton entertained a few of her friends at her home on First street Friday evening. Most of the evening was spent playing games after which all repaired to the kitchen where the boys turned the ice cream freezer while the girls cut the cake and gave orders. At a later hour the guests departed for their homes. Those present were the Misses Peterson, Koerner, Orr, Allworth and Templeton and the Messrs. Markee, Mobley, Dwinell Clapp, Charles Ward and Silverman.

WHEN HER BACK ACHES

A Woman Finds All Her Energy and Ambition Slipping Away

Forest Grove women know how the aches and pains that come when the kidneys fail make life a burden. Backache, hip pains, headache, dizzy spells, distressing urinary troubles, all tell of sick kidneys an warn you of the stealthy approach of diabetes, dropsy and Bright's disease. Doan's Kidney Pills permanently cure all these disorders. Here's proof of it in a Forest Grove woman's words:

Mrs. J. Van Donelen, living on Pacific Ave., Forest Grove, Ore., says: "I was greatly benefited by the use of Doan's Kidney Pills. I suffered from this complaint for some time and my back finally became so weak and painful that I was scarcely able to do my household duties. My kidneys were disordered, the secretions very unusual causing me great difficulty and annoyance at times. I tried two or three different kinds of remedies, but found no relief until Doan's Kidney Pills were brought to my attention, and I procured a box. The trouble has entirely left me and I am now enjoying good health. I wish all women suffering from kidney complaint to use Doan's Kidney Pills and they will be well satisfied with the results obtained."

Social Union Meets.

A very interesting paper upon the life and customs of the Filipino people was delivered by Mr. A. E. Yoder before the Social Union last Monday evening. Mr. Yoder has been in the Islands for four years employed by the United States government as a teacher, thus coming in contact with a large number of people.

ABORIGINES.

According to the best authorities the aboriginal inhabitants were the Nigritos, very small in stature, not exceeding four feet eight inches in height. They are today the smallest people in the world. They live in the mountain districts of the islands. These Aborigines are expert hunters and live mostly like wild animals. Very few of them live in houses, or till the soil. Mr. Yoder said they obeyed the bible injunction—"Take no thought of the morrow what you shall eat—" For the morrow's food is sought only when hungry. If a wild animal is killed they camp right there on the spot, until the carcass is devoured.

THE FILIPINO.

The present dominant race is the Filipinos, a hybrid of the Malay and Yellow races. The hybridization of these peoples has been going on for the past ten centuries.

The Filipino people may be divided into six main divisions, each tribe speaking a different language. There are many minor tribes speaking various dialects. Constant jealousy and friction exist between the tribes. Since the American occupation and the introduction of the English language through the schools, this tribal antagonism is being broken down. The Igorotes or head hunters are in no sense a representative type of the present Filipino. The Igorotes are one of the Aboriginal tribes and form a very small percent of the total population.

MOROS.

The Moros which inhabit the southern part of the islands are the most warlike of all the tribes. They are disciples of Mohammed. The women dress like the men warrior and participate in all the battles. Mr. Yoder described the scene of the battlefield in which the American troops fought with the Moros. The engagement took place in the crater of an extinct volcano. No Moro would surrender and the battle only ended when the last one in the crater was killed. Practically the only way of subjugating this fierce warlike tribe is by extermination; the rattling gun being the most effective remedy.

A PERNICIOUS SPORT.

The Filipino cock fights is one of the most vicious and pernicious of sports. The Filipino thinks more of his game bird than he does his children. These fighting birds range in prices from twenty-five up to a hundred and fifty dollars. Large crowds of people gather to witness these contests. It seldom requires three minutes for one of the birds to slay his antagonist, they are armed with sharp knives and sometimes a single thrust with his steel spear will put the other bird out of commission. These contests foster the gambling habit, promote cruelty, and has a degrading effect upon the people. The introduction of track and baseball athletics has tended to lessen the popularity of these barbaric games.

FIESTA.

Every noted event is celebrated by a banquet, whether it be the death of a person or a victory in battle. Great feasts are prepared where a large number of people participate. Roast pig is one of the main dishes. These celebrations call forth the people in their most gala attire, torch light processions are made with brilliant effect. The banquet ends with a dance.

COMMERCE.

The Chinese and Spaniards compose in the main the merchant class. In some districts, however, the Filipinos are shop-keepers. The poor transportation facilities discourage the cultivation of much of the land. The sugar output is curtailed by the high duty the United States imposes on this product. Agriculture is in a primitive state. The large plantations around Manila are in the hands of the Spaniards. During the war much of their property was destroyed and many have not rebuilt their homes through the constant fear of the Filipinos.

EDUCATION.

With the advent of American control, schools were established by the United States. There are in the islands 750 American teachers. These are divided into three classes, each pursuing a different line of work. Some supervise the work and others carry on a regular course of study. High schools have also been established. The Filipinos are eager to learn the English language and the educational outlook is most encouraging says Mr. Yoder. The revenue collected on imported goods pays for all public improvements and the maintenance of the schools. Mr. Yoder then touched briefly upon the plan of civil government. There is a popular assembly composed of citizens of the islands. Suffrage qualifications require a person to be a tax payer upon $400 worth of property or be able to speak and write the English language. The Governor-General is appointed by the President of the United States and he in turn has power of choosing his five cabinet officers who have general supervision over internal affairs. Before any law passed by the popular assembly can become effective, it must be approved by the Governor-General and his cabinet officers.

Mr. Yoder showed thorough knowledge of conditions existing in the islands. His paper was most entertaining and instructive. On the motion of Mr. C. Clapp the social union extended to Mr. Yoder a unanimous vote of thanks. The new officers for the coming year were elected. Prof. F. C. Taylor was elected president to succeed Principal H. L. Bates. Mr. V. E. Waterman was elected vice president. Dr. Arthur C. Boggess was chosen corresponding secretary, Miss Grace Payne elected recording secretary and Miss Helen Bollinger was elected to the office of treasurer.

Surprise Party.

Mr. Haskell Ferrin was very pleasantly surprised by a number of his college friends a week ago Friday night. It was a genuine surprise and it took nearly half the evening for Mr. Ferrin to recover.

Games were played and a great deal of amusement was derived from the process of lifting by hypnosis. The young ladies managed to lift everyone except Pres. Ferrin who, because of his unbelief would not go up.

Those present were the Misses Wheelodon, Leiser, Ireland, Templeton, Lake, Bollinger and Thomas, and the Messrs. McCoy, Aller, Weathered, Raul Abraham, James Ward, Hoonan, and Ferrin.

Miss Olivia Ferrin returned home last Wednesday after closing a very successful year's work in Pendleton Academy.

The commencement plays promise to be of excellent quality. The performers have practiced diligently for the past two months.

Miss Ellen Brobst, who has been teaching in Oregon City the past year, was the guest of Miss Thomas Saturday and Sunday.

His Profession.

In the midst of our tea drinking in the little Parisian restaurant, says Miss Betham-Edwards in an account of "Home Life in France," a gentlemanly individual wearing a tall hat and frock coat entered and, after a short colloquy with the young master, passed out.

"You would never guess that gentleman's errand," Marcel said, smiling, as he reseated himself at the tea table.

"He looked to me like a rather distinguished customer," I replied. "Some government functionary on half pay or an owner of bonds?"

How a Flea Jumps.

It is said that a flea leaps 200 times its height, and while it usually does land on its feet, it often falls, especially when it falls on a perfectly smooth surface where the claws can get only a slight hold. A flea has six legs, whose great length and bulk make them so heavy that they must be a great help in keeping their own right side up when it makes one of those gigantic jumps, and when it lands upside down or in some other way its ability to kick is so great that not more than one wriggle is needed to set things right. A flea's wings are mere scutes and of no use; but, small and worthless as they are, they tell the entomologist something about the proper classification of the insect. To the flea itself they have no value.

(Original)

In the olden times, when things were not all ready-made by millions, Joseph Sanger stepped into a store where a variety of things were kept on sale. There were embroidered articles for women, fancy articles for household use and lounging articles for men. The latter consisted of dressing gowns, smoking jackets, slippers and such other paraphernalia.

"I'm a bachelor," said the young man—"a lone, lorn bachelor. I am obliged to spend a great deal of time in my room, and I may as well be comfortable. What have you in the line of wearing apparel for such use?"

The shopkeeper squared himself and surveyed his customer with calculation in his eyes. "Yes; I think they will fit you," he said at last. "The very thing—a smoking jacket, cap and slippers, brand new, beautifully embroidered. I got them in only yesterday, but I will sell the lot very cheap." He produced the articles. The young man tried them on, and they fitted him fairly well.

"You say they are new?" he asked. "They look shop worn." "Such things are made by fine ladies in indigent circumstances, who usually spend a great deal of time on them. I dare say they were a year or more in making. That accounts for their appearance."

Sanger bought the things for a song, took them home and the same evening put them on. As he saw himself in a mirror he thought them very becoming and a great bargain. Lighting a cigar, he sat down in his easy chair, feeling very comfortable. But notwithstanding that he was in fine apparel he was miserable. Who can be happy with nothing but walls to talk to? Thrusting his hands into the pockets of the jacket, he ran one of them against a bit of paper. Withdrawing it, he read:

The maker of this jacket would like to correspond with the purchaser with a view to matrimony.

"Well, now, I like that!" mused Sanger. "That woman has a long head. She knew there were even chances the things would fall into the hands of a bachelor, that the bachelor would wear them in a room all alone and want a wife. My dear, I'll go you."

He wrote a note and mailed it. It came back with postman's notes scribbled all over it: "Try here. Try there. Try everywhere." Sanger, disappointed, threw it on his dressing case. But the next evening on returning from business it was missing. The maid told him that the postman had asked for it, having found a party to whom it might belong. A few days later a note written on fine paper and bearing a crest was laid on a table in his room. He opened it and read:

Since placing the note in the article you describe, prosperity has come to me. Nevertheless, I shall be delighted to find a man who has in him the elements of a good husband.

There was no mention of the writer's age. When Sanger replied, which he did at once, he said that his age was twenty-six. Before going any further in the matter he would like to know the lady's age. There was no reply to this, and, fearing that she might be sensitive about her age, he wrote again, giving the old quotation "with loving hearts age makes no difference."

Then came an epistle stating that the age of the lady who had placed the paper in the smoking jacket was forty-two. Sanger was much disappointed and forthwith committed the note to the wastebasket. He was not in need of marrying a fortune and did not propose on any account to marry a woman sixteen years his senior.

Meanwhile a lady acquaintance told him that she wished to introduce him to a young friend of hers. Sanger consented and met an attractive girl of eighteen, with whom he proceeded straightway to fall in love. His passion being reciprocated, an engagement ensued. When he was feeling the happiest a note came from his correspondent stating that she had looked up his record, was satisfied with it and was ready to make his acquaintance. Sanger paid no attention to the note. Presently he received another, stating that if he thought he could trifle in that way with unprotected women he was mistaken. The courts would do her justice.

Sanger was troubled. It appeared that he had been drawn into a trap by a woman for blackmail. She had his letters, though there was no offer of marriage in them, so he might as well write one or two more, trying to fix the matter up. The replies he got puzzled him. They seemed to have been written rather by a young girl than a middle aged woman. Indeed, there was something very unsophisticated in them. He finally determined to meet her and find out just what kind of an enemy he was fencing with.

He made an appointment to meet at a certain spot in the park. As he was about to keep it along came a letter from his fiancée asking him to come to her at that very hour. This was unfortunate, but he resolved to ignore the request. He went to the park.

As he approached the rendezvous whom should he see but his fiancée herself. He halted, but, having been seen by her, he approached. She stood laughing at him. When she had driven him to the verge of anger she explained.

Twenty years ago her mother wrote the note he had found in his dressing gown. His reply had fallen into her hands, and she had been his correspondent. She had secured the introduction and had since been amusing herself by continuing the correspondence. ROSALIE WHITING.
