An interesting novel soon to be written and published by Oregon's gifted writer, Eva Emery Dye, of Oregon City, will have its foundation in Forest Grove. It was here that the heroine lived and also was buried. For a number of years the heroine was a missionary to the Hawaiian Islands and on her death bed she asked the natives to bring her body to Forest Grove, the resting place having been for many years under one of the large oaks near the main entrance to the campus. Later the body was taken to the cemetery for burial. While in Forest Grove last week Mrs. Dye gathered much data for her book.

Mrs. Phillip E. Bauer, of Salem was the guest of her parents on Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Garison, on last Friday returning home by the way of Portland the same day.
