He stated that fifteen students had successfully passed the examination and appointment would be made soon.

D. H. Ellsworth, for the past few months head printer for the PRESS, recently resigned his position without notice. With the signs of spring came the uncontrollable longing to "hit" the road; and with not so much as a grip sack to hamper him in his travels and with no tent to fold like the Arabs he silently stole away in the stillness of the night. Though rather uncommunicative and subject to very sudden changes of mind, be it said of him that he was a skilled workman, and when he tires of cross ties and brake rods, he may linger in some other office long enough to make his loss felt keenly when he leaves while Old Sol is beneath the horizon.

SECRETARY.

Opportunity knocks at every man's door, but if the individual himself is continually knocking, opportunity is not embraced. The common fate of a chronic "knocker" sort or otherwise, is that he is too busy at his trade to correct the wrongs he complains of.
