"The man who is fitted to take care of himself in all the conditions in which he may be placed, is, in a very important sense, an educated man. The savage who understands the habit of animals, who is a good hunter and fisher, is a man of education, taking into consideration his circumstances. The graduate of a university who cannot take care of himself—no matter how much he may be studied—is not an educated man."—Ingersoll.

"Windy Jim" Discourses

"Windy" Jim recrossed his legs, spit on the floor and tried to imitate a cough and we all knew there was something coming.

"I was strollin' leisurely down Pecifik Avenoo wone't, when I was out in Forest Grove," he began, taking another shot at the floor with a ball of cotton.

"An' I heered the old fire-bell a jinglein to beet the band; well, I didn't lose no time gittin' round to the bell tower to git wind uv the excitement when I found out 'twas only the volunteer fire-cumpenny goin' to have a meetin'." Well, I goes in tu the magnifeecent city-hall auditoree-um whar they was meetin' an' when I got tu lookin' round the shivers begin runnin' up an' down whar my back-bone was extracted frum the time I had the depend-a-seetus. "Were you ever in a lunatik asyleeman' the guards gone and the inmates begin gittin' kinda familier like? 'Thets jist the feelin' what I had when I looked them fellers over." "You could tell by their looks that most of um was branelless and you could tell by the condishun of the place in which the meetin' was held that the rest of um was." Anybody what was fit tu be running at large and alone would uv absolutelee refused tu okupie sich quarters." "But the fellers looked quite harmless like so I sets down on the floor, that bein bout the only furnichur in the place." "There was won feller sittin' on a barrell of rubbish an' got his close fast on a nail an' couldn't git off without assistence an' the rest was a sittin' on the floor an' boxes an other rubbish." "The floor was littered up with boards, an' dirt, an' pieces of iron an' tin cans an' other trash as ought to bin out in a rubbish pile." "Off in one corner was a little room used fer a jale an' I heered somethin' in thar an' I stepped over tu investigate and durned if thar wasn't a bed mattress in one corner an' a blanket in the other an' both of 'em was makin' fer the door at a purty lively rate." "Well I picks up one corner of the mattress—only I didn't keep it very long—there was the blamdest lot of gosh-derned miss-e-lan-e-us collekshun of bugs an' things you ever saw." "Well you bet I skee-dadeled out o' there." "Next day I asked a feller what was the matter with the upper stories of the members of the fire-cumpenny an' he said nothin' at all only that was the only place in town they was allowed tu meet an' a contract had bin let bout a year before tu build a new city hall an' fire-house combined an' that the money was in the bank tu pay fer it with an' the boys was waitin' fer that."

Then he says, kind of confidenshel like, 'tother night the council decided tu put off the buildin' indefinitlee an' when the fire-boys git next to that I reckon they'll disband, I no I wood if it was me." "Guess when they find they ain't got no fire pertekshun they'll sit up and take notis to the wishes uv the people, maybe."

"Loan me a match, will yer, Cy?"

Father Powers of Tillamook, was in the Grove Friday and Saturday. Father Powers stopped here on his return from Portland, where he had been in consultation with the Arch-Bishop relative to the securing of a house of worship for his parish.
