"Windy Jim" Discourses

"Pete Maginnis was a tellin' of some goste stories which he kalkultated wood give some of the boys night-mare or sumthin', when 'Windy Jim' cum in an' set down in his usual place."

"There were a couple of strangers in the store that evenin' and in course they hed to raise Petes' ante somewhat an' when they got thru 'Windy' begins."

"One time out in the Will-lammet Valley' says 'Windy'—he allus spins his yarns out in Oregon sumwhar—'me an' a feller named Bill Smith went deer huntin' over in the Trask river country an' camped on a little lake called by the injins hi-ukukem-musk-a-muck or some sich an uncivilized name."

"There were some kind uv a devil in it an' one time when a young injun princess cum ridin' a white horse down to water jist at midnight thet derved devil grabbed her an' the horse an' took 'em down to the bottom of the lake where he lived with the princess fer his wife an' every night 'long bout midnight her an' the horse would rise outen the middle uv the lake an' ride around the coundree lookin' fer a nice fat brave fer the devil's breakfast."

"The injins used to send some dried up old squaw down every few nights teu set their watches, she cum so regular." "Well, me an' Bill didn't no nuthin' 'bout the derved gost so we was sleepin' away like sixty when the thing cum around, an' got teu feelin uv my ribs so as I woke up kinda sudden like an' yelled teu Bill an' he set right up an' begin' rubbin' his eyes."

"Bill weighed bout four hundred an' when the gost saw Bill was so nice an' plump she left me an' took poor Willyum by the collar an' hauled him out in tu the lake an' I was to blamed surprised teu even holrrr." "Next mornin' soon as we could see we went out an' moved camp an' saw some old settlers which told us all about the tragedy etc."

"Thot yer sed yer pard was et up by the devil" said one of the strangers. "Nope" said Windy "the gost got him out into the lake alright but Bill was so blamed fat the devil himself couldn't make him sink, why one time when we was sailin' together the ship spring a leak an' we jist tied Bill teu the mast an' when the ship sunk teu Bill why we jist drifted teu shallow water an' grounded."

But the strangers had dissappeared.
