The Day We Celebrate

July the fourth, one thousand nine hundred and ten, the Natal day of the nation, anniversary of that day in the year 1776, when, midst clamor of bells and shouts of an oppressed people, that glorious document, the "Declaration of Independence," was heralded broadcast to the world, in open defiance of tyranny and injustice, a straight forward and open proclamation of the birth of freedom, a determined expression of the desire for truth and justice, backed by the strong arms and willing hearts of sturdy men and noble women.

That freedom which we enjoy today, and the birth of which will be celebrated wherever the stars and strips is unfurled to the breeze was not secured in a day, nor a week; neither has it been kept intact in the years that have elapsed, without struggle and sacrifice. Still the nation lives. It has passed through periods of stress and trouble, always to emerge triumphant, with banners unsullied, stronger and more sturdy than before, upheld by the patriotism of a devoted people, true to the flag and country.

The day we celebrate, the why and wherefore, should be instilled into the mind of every young American; the lessons taught by the deeds of our forefathers, who made possible the America of today, should be more firmly implanted upon the sensitive brains of the rising generation, so that when manhood and womanhood arrives, the teachings of liberty, truth, justice and equality will be firmly rooted, never to be dislodged.

The Changes to Come

One who stops to compare the present with the past, might well wonder at the progress and advancement of the world as a whole and of America in particular. Monday, July the fourth, just one hundred and thirty four years will have passed into the great void of time; one hundred and thirty four years of continued enlightenment, of accruing and increasing knowledge. Steam has supplanted the ancient six-horse stage, and is in turn being replaced by the power derived from electricity. Machinery now does the work formerly performed by hand. Every line of science and endeavor has made strides along the road, knowledge and achievement, wonderful to behold. And yet more is to come. Who can say, in a spirit of prophecy, what the next hundred years will bring forth, or even the next twenty-five years. Navigation of the air is an assured fact, and but remains to be more fully developed, to assure us of a new method of transportation for passengers and freight. In fact, the use of air-ships as public conveyances, is now being experimented with, and bids fair to prove successful. The storage of power for commercial purposes, making unnecessary the maintenance of expensive generating stations, is being experimented with. The wireless telegraph and telephone is rapidly reaching a state of practical utility for common use. Experiments too numerous to mention, in brief space, are being made, all seeking to the comfort and well-being of mankind. That, at least fifty per cent of these experiments will prove successful, is without doubt, and those of us who are privileged to remain upon this oasis of space, will live to witness changes just as remarkable, and far-reaching in their effect upon the human race, as have occurred in the past.—Selah.

An Attractive Business Section

Forest Grove has an opportunity to present to the outside world one of the most attractive end enticing business sections of any city of the Willamette Valley. All that is required is a little labor and money. The streets surrounding the park adjoining the Congregational Church, if asphalted, and adorned with standards containing clusters of electric lights, would present an appearance ten times as attractive as they do at present, especially at night, and would tripple the value of fronting property. Think it over, seriously.

How About Street Sprinkling

The time is rapidly approaching when the sprinkling of the City streets is supposed to start, but nothing has been heard from this proposition for some time past. We trust the matter has not been permitted to die, after the strenuous efforts made by the Woman's Club to secure its fulfillment. How about it, citizens, do we, or do we not, sprinkle the streets during the hot spell? It's up to you.

It's a long lane that has no turn.

Be sure your right, then go ahead.

All kinds of weather are favorable for wild oats.

Never trouble trouble until trouble troubles you.

A bald-headed man may not always come out on top.

Carelessness in small details often cost big dollars later.

Good cheer is a great lubricant; it oils all of life's machinery.

Keep your weather eye on the man who always clap you on the back.

What would happen to the fools if the wise men made no mistakes.

He failed because his business grew faster than his capacity to direct it.

Aim high—but be sure you draw a bead on something beside blue sky.

It's often a long, rocky road that leads from promise to performance.

It does not require a keen eye to see the gaps in your neighbor's fence.

The man who "buttons up" each job as he goes along rests well o'nights.

Anyway, the succulent strawberry repels the temptation of the cold storage plant.

Why carry a burden of past woes? The ability to forget is a fine, joy-giving art.

Don't rub the fur the wrong way on a cat's back, if you don't want to get scratched.

Too much rush and haste makes not real progress. The man who wins rests when tired.

Ever hear that old saying? "Those who live in glass houses shouldn't throw stones."

Somehow, you're always smaller after a lie. If you're not found out its in your own estimation.

It requires greater wisdom to know when to take advice than it does to know when to give it.

The man who places a low estimate upon himself will not find others bidding very high upon him.

For all of Wall street's wreck of values and crash of stocks, the price of "ham and" refuses to budge.

Consistency is a virtue—Don't knock a man's business, and at the same time take his money for advertising.

Every male of the "genus bachelor" hunt a cyclone cellar. The girl graduates have been turned loose.

When you're right you can afford to keep your temper, and when your wrong you can't afford to lose it.

Intellectual patience: That which prompts a man to use diplomacy when it would be easier to use his fists.

The fellow who can't has one advantage over the fellow who can—some one else will do the "canning" for him.

If you have that rare faculty known as "good taste"—the most profitable place you can make use of it is in your advertising.

Speaking of the sweet girl graduate, she is a lucky one who receives a diploma one week and a marriage license the next.

Some folks get through this world on bluff and then bluff the world into thinking that they go through on their smartness.

Then again the St. Louis girl who chased a Jack-the-Hugger six blocks may have been insistently demanding an encore.

The editor of an Iowa paper married his compositor two months ago—now he's after a divorce—cause too—much pi.

It is not through refrainment, but by attainment, not through re-pression, but by ex-pression that the PLUS man is evolved.

That Harvard professor who said that a man can live on 20 cents per day was speasing academically, and for academic purposes.

Human nature is naturally lazy. We do everything from motive and the strength of the motive measures the result of the effort.

Portland is getting as bad as the east for trunk mysteries. Better have the local dealers handle the wardrobe variety for a change.

An optimistic man is one to whom his own cabbagees look altogether as beautiful, charming, fragrant and desirable as his neighbor's roses.

Because you have been in business at the same old stand for 20 years, and your father 20 years before you, is no sign that you shouldn't advertise.

When you interfere with other people you might as well make up your mind to take your raps good naturedly, for you will have to take them from both sides.

The Germans have started an air-ship passenger line—simultaneously Teddy returned to Yankee-land. It takes a full hand to beat the dutch, and then some.

If the people who pack the berries we buy should make a mistake some time and turn the box upside down when filling, we would come pretty near getting full measure.

Napoleon is said to have had but few failures in his fathoming of the minds of the gentler sex. Too bad he is not around to try his skill today, for we would predict a dismal failure.

HILDA THE HELPER

IV.—She Sends News to the Paper

Hilda the Helper never let a single chance escape her a piece of "booming news" to get and SEND IT TO THE PAPER.

She never let a chance go by to boost the place; she'd grab it and poke it in the public eye—THE THING BECAME A HABIT.

Hilda the Helper helped herself and likewise all her neighbors to profit in the way of pelf by reason of her labors.
