"Windy Jim" Discourses

"Out at Forest Grove won't time," said Windy Jim, when everybody hed run out of yarns, "there was a feller named Jones who hed a wife an' a yaller dog an' a cow, wat raised radishes fer the lokel market. The fust of the crop he raised with too fingers, an' in a few days he began tu use his hole hand, then it was both hands, and finally he hed tu use a derrick to raise 'em.

"That reminds me of a feller who tried tu raise money with a derrick. He raised fore dollars an' sixty cents all at won't time. But them blamed radishes was the most curious thing you ever seed. When they was bout a month old they begin to git holler an' before all of 'em hed been raised you could hear 'em holler fer miles around. Some of 'em got big enough fer dog houses an' won't feller made a regler hotel outen one of 'em. There was bout sixty rooms in it an' the seed stalk was used fer a chimney an' the smoke used tu stalk around town in grate stile. Them radishes was fine, awl rite. I helped make cord wood outen the balance of 'em. Won't 'em hed a bees nest in it an' we got most a ton of honey outen it. Gim'me a match, Cy." But Cy couldn't match Windy.
