The first irrigation project started after the signing of the reclamation act by President Roosevelt in June, 1902, was formally dedicated March 20. This dam, built to impound the heretofore waste waters of Salt and Tonto creeks, in Arizona, is the chief feature of one of the largest irrigation projects in the world. It is located seventy-six miles east of Phoenix, which is in the midst of a wonderfully fertile valley, 240,000 acres of which will be refreshed with water from the great reservoir which the dam creates. The dam is 235 feet long at the bottom between the canyon walls, and from the river level to the crest of the

LIGHT AND WATER RATES.

The water rate in our city for dwellings is $1.00 for first faucet and not to exceed $1.50 for any dwelling. The light rate is 12 1/2 cents per Killowatt where meters are installed and 4 1/2c per candle power where there is no meter. Cut this out for future reference.

There is one simple method which the prospective buyer of land in a new section can adopt which should enable him to determine whether he is being asked a price that is exorbitant and greater than conditions will justify. This is to shuck the real estate agent for a period of several days and quietly nose around among the settlers of the locality and find out what some of them will sell out for. A gullible buyer we read of not long since failed to do this—swallowed all the real estate agent's hot air without winking, paid $6,000 for forty acres of land and a few weeks later, when he came to, found the tracts right beside his own and just as good could be bought a-plenty for $2,000 each. He knows more today, but it just about bankrupted him to find it out.

REGINA, SASK.

Growth of the City Recently Visited by Cyclone.

Some of the victims of the terrible cyclone at Regina, Sask. were acquaintances of Rev. Buck, who was in that vicinity during a part of 1905 and 1906. He gives a very interesting account of the settlement of that county. In 1903, he says, before the great inrush of settlers commenced, a small band of Benedictine fathers went from Minnesota looking for a location for a Catholic colony. Regina at that time was a village with one Catholic church in which mass was read once a month, or so. In 1905 the immigration had set in and the little building was unable to hold the congregations, even with three masses on Sunday. The next year a 50,000 church was erected and even that was inadequate for the rapidly growing town. Other denominations were also on the increase, the Presbyterians and Methodists having magnificent churches either built or under construction. In an almost magical manner the village had grown to the proportions of a city. Hotels were rapidly erected and as rapidly filled, while nearly every house was filled to its utmost capacity, and the post office was entirely too small to handle the mail. This was serious for often mail was delayed for a week at a time. Complaint did little good although bankers and business men made the complaints personally and by telegraph to the authorities at Ottawa. Gradually, however, everything was adjusted and at the time of the disaster, Regina was one of the most beautiful cities of western Canada. The last census gave a population of 35,000. The people are Americans, Canadians and English with the usual number of various other nationalities. No doubt it will be rebuilt at once and equal, if not surpass the old Regina.

Citizenship, Social Service, and Leadership—Perhaps nineteenth-twentieths of the good that you will accomplish in your lifetime will consist in the faithful and efficient performance of the daily tasks by which you earn your living. The obligations of a common citizenship, however, rest on us all. American citizenship never meant more than it does in the year 1912. The votes that will be cast in the party conventions and in the elections held this year will register a sum total of earnest, personal and political conviction that has never been equaled since the Civil War. When the present prologue of partizanship and personalities is over, we will realize that we are walking along the line of a high ridge in national affairs. Live the days of preparation, then as you go through them. The days and the hours are more fully charged with life than the days and the hours of yesterday. They train the mind and clear the judgment for the issues of tomorrow.
