A handsomely finished and well equipped school building has just been completed at Lyda, above Gales City and about 10 miles from Forest Grove. The building contains one large room sufficient to care for the needs of the district for some time to come.

M. S. Taunton is the possessor of a large sized agate, which he picked up at Newport, and which contains an almost perfect reproduction of a Venician scene by moonlight. The dome of the Palace of the Doges is plainly visible, rising above a network of canals, upon which several gondolas are floating about.

Perhaps this number of the Press is not up to the standard, but the Christmas holiday coming on Wednesday, and believing in play as well as work, the entire force were granted an opportunity to celebrate without the worry of work. Better things are coming, and we have many excellent features in store for our readers.
