Eva Booth, Head of Salvation Army In the United States

Photo by American Press Association.

EVA BOOTH, who is commander of the Salvation Army in America, daughter of the late General William Booth, was a good angel of the poor of New York city at Christmas time. Under her supervision thousands of Christmas dinner baskets were distributed to worthy families who otherwise would have gone without turkey and "all the fixin's." Many were the heart touching scenes as the poor people came forward for their gifts. One aged woman in particular begged the privilege of clasping Eva Booth's hands and muttered a prayer for her blessing.

DEVOTED TO THE W. C. T. U.

Edited by Mrs. Katherine R. Kerr

The regular business meeting of the month of the W. C. T. U. was held at the residence of Mrs. Wm. Kerr last Friday. The meeting opened with Devotional exercises. Roll call responded to by scripture texts. According to the request from the State President a portion of the time was given to the different bills coming up before the legislature. The Working Men's Compensation bill and other bills regarding sale of liquors and the one to prohibit minors entering pool rooms received attention. Meeting adjourned by singing "Blest be the Tie That Binds."

Mothers of today have the time or should have, which our grandmothers did not have. Household labor is lightened, a sewing machine in a day turns out the finished garment, that took days in the time gone by. There were tired mothers in those days as now. But, dear mothers, where are the home gatherings of the boys and girls as in the old days? The gathering around the fire or the center table that our busy bustling life has crowded out of many homes. Card parties did not call so many mothers in those days and the boys and girls turned out to look after themselves. Mothers of the W. C. T. U., and other mothers, the boys and girls need the home center and the sweet quiet influence of a resting mother more now than then. How many of you mothers have the quiet mothers' hour when the soft light fills the room and the boys and girls crowd close up to mother's chair to talk over school and all the trials that have come, and the blessings too; and the "forgive me, mother," softly spoken of the boy or girl as they confess in that quiet hour of some mistake or fault? I am sure the lips of mothers whose ears hear these faults confessed more, say if we could hear the words, "Bless the Lord, Oh! my soul, and forget not all his benefits."

Sickness came to the pastor of a poorly paid country church one winter, and the pastor without funds. A number of the church members decided to meet at the pastor's home and offer prayers for the recovery of the sick ones and for material help also. One of the deacons was offering fervent prayer for blessings on the pastor and his home, when there came a loud knock at the door. The Deacon opened the door, and a farmer's boy stood there. "What do you want, boy?" said the elder. "Pa could not come, so I brought his prayers." "Brought his prayers! Why, what do you mean?" "Yes," said the boy, "brought his prayers and they are out in my wagon. Give me a lift and I will bring the prayers in." Pa's prayers were potatoes, flour, bacon, oatmeal, apples, jellies, warm clothing and other things for the sick ones. That prayer meeting adjourned at short notice. This story makes one think of the Christian men who pray for Christ's Kingdom to come and go out and cast their ballot for the licensed saloon.

"A true food will yield heat and energy without any harm to the organs of the body. Alcohol yields heat and energy but acts at the same time as a poison, Dr. Culler gives this illustration. "When sulphuric acid and water are mixed in equal parts, the mixture becomes very hot, the acid will eat up iron. Suppose an engineer should mix the sulphuric in the water when he gets up steam, but soon the engineer would find the material destroyed by the acid and the boiler would soon be in the shop for repairs. Alcohol corrodes and eats up the tissues, and so injures the delicate machinery of the body and finally destroys it so the body decays. Intoxicants heat temporarily, they also "eat."

Regarding Advertising.

The Lincoln Trade Review has come to this conclusion in regard to the value of the newspaper as an advertising medium: A sale is half made when you get a customer inside your store, says some one. This may be true, but the question arises, how are you to get him inside? Naturally many plans suggest themselves, but when sought to be put into execution they are found not feasible. It is therefore very important that the merchant study this feature of his business very closely. A window display will sometimes do the trick. Attractive display cards will be found to work well at times, but the best way we have ever tried, is advertising through the columns of the local newspaper. Here you get an audience to be had nowhere else. Your ad in the local paper is read by every member of the family, while the show windows and the display cards are seen and read only by those who happen to go by the store. We would not disparage any form of publicity. Advertise in every way possible, but would urge not to neglect the columns of your local newspaper. It's publisher, if he is the right kind of a newspaperman, is always working for the best interests and the upbuilding of the community, and it will not only pay you to work with him, but as a matter of justice and right it is your duty to do so.

Will Sell Dead Man's Ranch.

HILLSBORO, OR.—Sheriff Reeves has advertised for sale the ranch belonging to J. D. Roselair, who was executed something over two years ago for the murder of his wife. The sale is to be made under foreclosure of a mortgage given by Roselair before the murder to John A. Ritter, of Bethany. The place is a mountain ranch in the extreme northwestern part of the county, and was conveyed by Roselair to John A. Jeffrey, the Portland attorney, who defended him. The state is also seeking to recover the costs of the prosecution out of the land, but the question of priority between the attorney and the state has not yet been decided.

The greatest incentive in the campaign's for prohibition should be the children's welfare. We should pass over to the men and women of the future, now in the making, a clean, safe, pure world, not one cursed with that destroyer of childhood and youth—a legalized liquor traffic.

Good News for Democrats.

WASHINGTON.—No matter how important the business before Congress may be, there is nothing that so interests the public at large as the handing out of Federal pie. Not hunks of it, although the members of Congress who find their daily mail burdened with petitions for jobs are tempted to think so. It's just a peculiarity of most folks that they wonder who will get all the jobs that are to be distributed. That's why the determination of the Senate to hold up confirmations of the President's nominations has aroused so much interest. There's a deadlock over it and unless the democrats are given some concessions they threaten not to allow any of the names to go through during this entire session. Of course this makes the cold chills creep along the spinal columns of a large number of very excellent gentlemen and a few more worthy ladies who are perfectly acceptable to the President, but who seem unable to get past the Senate obstructions.

Free Lecture on Thursday.

O. M. Plummer, a prominent business man of Portland, will give a lecture in the Central School building Thursday evening, February 20, on "Back to the Farm from the City Man's Viewpoint." Mr. Plummer is secretary of the Portland Stockyards Association and comes highly recommended by State superintendent of Public Instruction L. R. Alderman. The lecture will start promptly at 8 o'clock, and admission will be free.

Yadrif Club Tender Reception.

In honor of Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Griffin, who are leaving this city for a location further south, the Yadrif club gave a reception and dance last Friday evening in the Knights of Pythias hall. About 25 couple were present, and the evening was most pleasantly passed with waltz and two-step. Before the party broke up, light refreshments were served. Mr. Griffin is in the employ of the Oregon Electric railroad.
