a great system of government, which has stood through a long age as in many respects a model for those who seek to set liberty upon foundations that will endure against fortuitous change, against storm and accident. Our life contains every great thing and contains it in rich abundance. But the evil has come with the good.

and much fine gold has been corroded. With riches has come inexcusable waste. We have squandered a great part of what we might have used and have not stopped to conserve the exceeding bounty of nature without which our genius for enterprise would have been worthless and impotent, scorning to be careful, shamefully prodigal as well as admirably efficient. We have been proud of our industrial achievements, but we have not hith erto stopped thoughtfully enough to count the human cost, the cost of lives snuffed out, of energies overtaxed and broken, the fearful physical and spiritual cost to the men and women and children upon whom the dead weight and burden of it all has fallen pitilessly the years through. The groans and agony of it all had not yet reached our ears, the solemn, moving undertone of our life, coming up out of the mines and factories and out of every home where the struggle had its intimate and familiar seat. Wing the great government went many deep secret things which we too long delayed to look into and scrutinize with candid, fearless eyes. The great government we loved has too often been made use of for private and selfish purposes, and those who used it had forgotten the people.

Duty of Americans Outlined,

At last a vision has been vouchsafed us of our life as a whole. We see the the forces of party, but the forces of bad with the good, the debased and decadent with the sound and vital. With this vision we approach new affairs. Our duty is to cleanse, to reconsider, to restore, to correct the evil without impairing the good, to purify mon all honest men, all patriotic, all and humanize every process of our common life without weakening or helping me, I will not fail them if they sentimentalizing it. There has been something crude and heartless and unfeeling in our haste to succeed and be great. Our thought has been, "Let every man look out for himself; let every generation look out for itself." made it impossible that any but those who stood at the levers of control should have a chance to look out for morals. We remembered well enough edy.

our life as a nation to the light that shines from the hearth fire of every man's conscience and vision of the right. It is inconceivable we should do this as partisans; it is inconceivable we should do it in ignorance of the facts as they are or in blind haste. We shall restore, not destroy. We shall deal with our economic system as it is and as it may be modified, not as it might be if we had a clean sheet of paper to write upon, and step by step we shall make it what it should be, in the spirit of those who question their own wisdom and seek counsel and knowledge, not shallow self satisfaction or the excitement of excursions whither they cannot tell. Justice, and only justice, shall always be our motto. Task Not Merely One of Politics.

Nor have we studied and perfected

And yet it will be no cool process of mere science. The nation has been deeply stirred-stirred by a solemn passion, stirred by the knowledge of wrong, of ideals lost, of government too often debauched and made an instrument of evil. The feelings with which we face this new age of right and opportunity sweep across our heartstrings like some air out of God's own presence, where justice and mercy are reconciled and the judge and the brother are one. We know our task to he no mere task of politics, but a task which shall search us through and through, whether we be able to understand our time and the need of our people, whether we be indeed their spokesmen and interpreters, whether we have the pure heart to comprehend and the rectified will to choose our high course of action.

This is not a day of triumph: it is a day of dedication. Here muster not humanity. Men's hearts wait upon us: men's lives hang in the balance; men's hopes call upon us to say what we will do. Who shall live up to the great trust? Who dares fail to try? I sumforward looking men, to my side. God will but counsel and sustain me.

the commission is not securing the results desired, no matter how smoothly the machinery runs nor how excellent are the plans devised. Again, go slow at first. Experience is a great teacher, and you will need lots of teaching. Better plant 100 trees the first year and learn the difficulties connected therewith than to attempt to plant 1,000 and make a failure of it.

As a result of experimenting and experience after much thought the Norfolk (Va.) commission adopted the following general outline for its guidance, which may serve as pointers to others: nission look to the The plans of the comm protection of all trees on the streets com mencing with those in the most exposed situations and liable to greater damage. to save all the trees worth saving and to let even inferior trees continue to grou until it is in a position to substitute bet ter trees therefor; to refrain from set ting out trees upon any of the streets the downtown and other sections of th city that are liable to come into busine use within the next decade, preserving the trees already growing, but adding ne expense in setting out others that mathematic have to be removed within such period to commence a systematic planting trees upon the streets and boulevards having the greater amount of travel and filling in those streets in the thickly tled residential portions of the city where public spirited citizens have already set out a number of trees, thereby compl such sections; to take under the can the commission all trees of recen planting, whether planted by the commission or not, pruning, mulching and wa tering such trees the same as if they had been planted by the commission; to ar-range with the school board for the plant-ing of trees around all school grounds and upon the streets contiguous thereto for the distance of at least one block from
