WIFE SUES FATHER-IN-LAW

Woman Demands $25,000 for Loss of Her Husband's Love.

Hillsboro, Ore.—Lydia L. Mulloy, wife of Alfred Mulloy, of Laurel, 10 miles south of this city, has filed suit in the circuit court asking for $25,000 for alienation of her husband's affections. E. C. Mulloy, father of the young man is made defendant.

The Mulloys were married in January, 1911, and the wife swears that the father of her husband constantly attempted to make him believe that he married beneath his station in life. She says that in January of the present year she was induced to settle her rights with her husband for $750 and that thereupon he forced her to leave his home.

THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

At the Christian church next Sunday evening, the Christian Endeavor society will occupy the evening hour with an especially arranged program of great interest. The program is entitled "The Dreamer." An American girl has a dream in which representatives from different countries appear and tell the story of their country. The visitors from foreign countries all appear in costume. There will be special musical features, and an opening selection by the newly organized orchestra. You cannot afford to miss this evening of education and interest. It will be a very elaborately worked out program, and very instructive. The public cordially invited. The morning service will be at the usual hour, and the Bible school service promptly at ten o'clock.

DAINTIES WITH RAISINS.

RAISINS are a veritable boon to the housewife in winter, when there is not much choice in the matter of fruits. They are very nutritious, containing as they do from 50 to 75 per cent of grape and other fruit sugars. Raisins are really dried grapes.

To stone the raisins pour boiling water over them and let it stand for five or ten minutes. Then drain off the water and rub each raisin between the thumb and forefinger until the seeds slip out. Select for use fruit that is absolutely fresh.

An Emergency Jam.

Nuts and raisins make a nice dessert. Raisins in puddings add to their food value as well as make them more palatable.

Raisin Jam.—When other preserves are exhausted this may be made for an emergency. It tastes like grape jam. Wash and seed a pound of large sweet raisins. Put the fruit on the fire in a saucepan with a cup of water, half a pound of sugar and half a graded nutmeg. Cook until thick. Then remove from the fire and serve cold.

Stewed Raisins.—Wash the raisins carefully through several waters, put in a saucepan, cover with cold water, place on the fire and boil for about ten minutes. Flavor by adding a little lemon rind. Mix a little cornstarch with water and thicken by adding this to the stewed fruit. Use a teaspoonful of cornstarch to each half pound of raisins.

Brown Raisin Bread.—Take a cupful each of cornmeal, rye meal and whole wheat flour. Sift these together, then add one teaspoonful salt and two teaspoonfuls melted butter. Add to these one and three-quarter cupfuls water, three-quarters of a cupful of molasses, two and a half teaspoonfuls of soda and one cupful raisins. Steam for four hours.

A Winter Pie.

Raisin Pie.—Take a cupful and a half of flour, a tablespoonful of lard and one of sugar, a half teaspoonful of salt and a half pound of seeded raisins.

Wash the raisins. Put on with one cupful cold water. As soon as they boil add a little cornstarch, wet with cold water. Add the sugar and remove from fire at once, but keep warm to fill into the pie.

Sift the flour and salt into a bowl, add the lard and rub in very lightly. Add enough cold water to hold together. Roll out half the dough on a floured board. Line pie dish with the rolled dough and fill it with the raisins. Roll out the remainder of the dough. Wet the edges with cold water and cover. Brush the top with milk. Bake twenty minutes in hot oven.
