

Watch and Use the Want Ads

and you'll not need to be a mind reader

The thought has often come to you perhaps, that you could easily solve most difficulties if you were a mind reader—if you could for instance, KNOW who would be glad to rent your property, or to buy it; who would be glad to employ you.

Want advertisers, and those who watch the want ads, learn these things in a BUSINESS W A Y—not through occult means.

THE CITY BEAUTIFUL

CITY PLANNING DIFFICULT.

Requires Co-operative Effort to Secure Scientific Results.

Lack of adequate planning for industrial communities is vigorously discussed in the Survey by George B. Ford, city planning expert for Newark and lecturer on that subject at Columbia university. He says:

"Large cities are spending millions today to widen streets, cut through new streets, provide parks and playgrounds in congested areas, almost all of which might have been saved if the city had been originally planned with foresight. Hundreds of millions are spent on hospitals, asylums, sanitariums, jails, health, police and fire departments, a large portion of which could have been saved if the cities had not been so wastefully and unscientifically designed.

"For example, if the lot and block units and dimensions in sections surrounding the factories which moved to Norwood and Oakley, on the outskirts of Cincinnati, had been laid out along lines which experience has shown to be most economical and desirable for workmen's dwellings and if provision had been made for recreation for grownups as well as for children, as suggested by the English garden suburbs, the neighborhood of the factories would now be almost exclusively occupied by the employees in those factories instead of largely by clerks and business men, who commute daily to Cincinnati. And furthermore, the slum problem of Cincinnati itself would be vastly less urgent.

"If the lots were cut for the occupant instead of the occupant being trimmed to the lot, if streets and roadways were designed in location, direction, character and width for use and not according to obsolete precedent; if transit lines were designed with the same efficiency that the manufacturer exhibits in designing his own plant; if people could only realize that money spent in scientifically designed recreational facilities is paid back in many ways to the community, then the workmen's residential area instead of being an eyesore and a disgrace to the community would be what the English garden suburbs now are—the most charming and efficient housing areas to be found anywhere in the world.

TREES ADD CHARM TO HOMES.

Fine Mansions Found in City, but Pretty Homes in Country.

A very observant traveler of unquestioned taste observes: "I wish I could more forcibly impress upon the minds of the farmer the value of attractive surroundings. Every farm home should be attractive. It is not necessary to have a fine house or fancy cottage or expensive lawn fence to make the farm home pretty. To be sure, a neat fence, a few ornaments on the house and the free use of paint help mightily, but the chief attractions can be made of trees and shrubs. A shady lawn and a shady driveway are always attractive. Groups of trees, shrubs or flowers never fall to charm. The lawn may not be kept perfectly smooth, all the trees may not be cleanly pruned, yet the home place ornamented with them does not fail to convey the impression that peace and contentment dwell there. As a lady from the city said, 'A pretty farmhouse suggests a happy bird's nest.' We do not notice the dwelling so much as we do the surroundings. If the surroundings are pretty we know the interior of the house is all right and that it is the abode of love and contentment and all that makes life worth living. We look to the city for fine mansions, but to the country for pretty homes."

Peculiar Needs of Plants.

Plant purchasers in doubt regarding the best treatment for certain plants should ask of the party from whom they buy, for he is indeed a poor nurseryman who does not know more of the requirements of his wares than the average garden owner. California draws her garden vegetation from many lands of greatly varying climates, and it must not be supposed that all will thrive in the same garden and under like treatment. Many have peculiar needs regarding soils, heat, sunshine, amount of water and other conditions, and no one better knows these special requirements than the dealer who has produced salable plants of these sorts.

To Preserve Rosebuds.

Here is a method of preserving roses which in years gone by was commonly adopted: Well developed buds are gathered, and the cut end of the stalk is dipped in liquid wax until it is completely sealed. Each bud is then wrapped in tissue paper and packed away in a well fitting box. In this state the buds may be left for months, and when it is desired to expand them cut away the waxed end and place the stem in water which has been slightly warmed.—Strand.

Perennials Are Pretty.

At odd times plant hardy flowering perennials along the fence near the public road. They can often be dug in the woods or back lots and will cost only a few minutes' time to transplant. But they'll gladden the hearts of all who see them.

SCHOOL GARDENS VALUABLE.

Child Should Be Educated Out of Doors as Well as In.

The need of gardens for children, especially those residing in cities, is being more generally realized every month, and many progressive cities and towns are providing such spots for their youth. In the annual reports of the School Garden Association of New York the president says:

"After twenty-five years' experience as a teacher I am convinced that the incarceration of little children within four walls of a classroom for too long periods is a great error. The child must come into contact with nature or he is not educated. We have no choice in the matter because we were made to so develop. Therefore school gardening is worth while because it embodies an integral and fundamental element in education.

"The small garden plot is very important because it presents to every child in the school an ideal of outdoor work. Even if he cannot touch it with his own hands he can see it and watch it daily growth.

"If school gardening is worth while it should be a part of our course of study. It should be prescribed as in Chicago, Philadelphia, Washington, St. Paul and many other cities. It is best to place it in the fourth or fifth year as these children seem to be most attracted by school garden work, and if taught in these years in after years a great many of them will take it up at home.

"A great many social betterment organizations have encouraged children to clean up their back yards, to beautify front lawns, to plant trees, to cultivate gardens on vacant lots and to do other most commendable civic acts.

CHILDREN OF CITY—ENVIRONMENT ILLUSTRATES NEED OF GARDEN.

"The schools, too, have quite generally beautified their surroundings wherever possible. This work has progressed with little notion of its educational value. Its training power has been thought of as incidental to the great work of making better living conditions.

"No matter how much of value may be ascribed to the other points of view, the real value of school gardening arises from the fact that it is an integral part of the education of children. The child must come into contact with the soil and its manifestations or he is not fully educated.

"The school that does not provide for a children's garden is educating only in part. The child must also work in the sun, meet the winds and buffet the storms. We cannot educate through incarceration."

MUST CARE FOR FLOWERS.

Plants Must Be Well Fed, Well Cultivated and Not Crowded.

In the Woman's Home Companion Frank A. Waugh, a well known expert, writes an article, entitled "First Aid in the Garden," an extract from which follows:

"Prevention is better than cure in the garden as in the home.

"First and foremost, beyond all else important, is the ability to resist disease. This comes with good health and exuberant growth. Plants which are well fed, well cultivated, not overcrowded and have a proper allowance of water, and which are therefore making sound and vigorous growth, rarely acquire any serious plant diseases. Even insects, strange though it may seem, seldom attack a perfectly healthy plant or, at any rate, they hardly always appear first and most viciously on those plants or crops already weakened by disease or neglect. Thus good care and proper general management are the first and most important methods of combating plant diseases."

Testimony of a Back Yard.

I never saw my neighbor or his wife, but nothing could ever convince me they are not both excellent people, because my window overlooks their back yard, and their back yard has a clean carpet of turf and trees and several blue bushes beautifully in bloom, and all without a trace of careless disfigurement. And I hear the voices of children and the sound of children's games there on an evening. I believe in the testimony of back yards. They seldom deceive you, while the front is generally built for that especial purpose.—Chicago Inter Ocean.
