CORNELIUS

The thirty six by fifty foot addition to the Ingerbirgton warehouse has received its new coat of paint and is in perfect readiness with its new scales for storage of hay and grain.

Hay and grain are beginning to find their way into both the Buchanan Co. and the Ingerbirgton warehouses. The prosperity of the country around about is attested not only by the heavy harvest, but by the good horse flesh, which our farmers take pride in harnessing to their loads of produce. Cornelius farmers have some fine horses.

The tearing down of an old barn and the removal of the mass of the old lumber back of the Cornelius Hotel has given place to improvement that bears favorable comment.

New Road Popular.

Since the new county road to Netarts has been completed hundreds of people have traveled it by team and automobile and pronounce it to be one of the finest highways both as to construction and scenic beauty there is anywhere through the hills in the western part of Oregon, says the Tillamook Herald.

This road to the beach from Tillamook is a splendid thing for Tillamook, as Netarts beach is the finest along the Pacific coast. The road practically makes Netarts a part of Tillamook as it is only a few minutes run to the beach and with our improved hotel facilities many tourists can make their home in Tillamook. Beside the tourist business this road opens up a large section of fine ranch country along the beach which heretofore has been almost inaccessible to Tillamook. It is predicted that in the very near future electric cars will be running along this highway.

Pipe Line Progressing.

J. L. Stannard, engineer for the Washington-Oregon Corporation, was in the city Tuesday, enroute to Sain Creek. He says that the company expects to have the pipe line between Sain and Forest Grove completed within six weeks, and at the latest by September 25. As soon as the connection is made at Forest Grove with the Hillsboro terminal there, water will be turned into the county seat mains. The reservoir will be built this fall, but as the head gate, or intake, is over 200 feet higher than Hillsboro, there will be plenty of pressure.—Argus.

Name Carved in Early Days

This week while cutting a large fir tree on his place for fire-wood Frank Holcomb cut off a slab 18 inches thick and saw underneath what appeared to be letters cut into the wood and covered with pitch. Upon examination it was found to be an inscription reading, "H. Buxton, 1841." An old witness tree was known to have stood in that locality and this tree was cut in to a depth of 12 inches within the past few years in an effort to find the mark, but the searchers did not go deep enough. Henry Buxton was one of the pioneers of Washington county and was the grandfather of Austin Buxton of Forest Grove. Old residents say the name was undoubtedly carved by him. The slab has been preserved and it is suggested that the museum of the state historical society would be a fit place to deposit it. The growth above the name is an interesting feature, as showing the development of the tree in 72 years. Hillsboro Independent.

ed and was erected to replace the one destroyed by fire last winter. Prior to the burning of the barn Mr. Withycombe's residence with all its contents, which included wedding gifts, burned. Last winter while driving in Hillsboro a valuable horse was killed by a live wire and Mr. Withycombe had a narrow escape while endeavoring to entangle the animal. Hillsboro Independent.

WHY ADVERTISE?

The Best Way to Reach the Trade

After a thorough study of conditions that affect your sales, namely the prospective trade and your stock of goods, then your chief aim is to bring them together. You do this, on the one hand by preparing your goods so that they may be easily presented, and on the other hand you must notify the trade that you are ready to serve them.

It is not enough to simply notify the people in your section, you must argue with them, suggest to them, and convince them that you have for sale what they need or what they desire. That your store is the best place for them to trade, because of advantages of quality, price and convenience must be impressed upon your prospective customers.

It is the psychological law of repetition of the same idea, that will finally causes the average customer to "Catch the Spirit" so to speak, and will be guided thereby.

Now think for a minute, your store windows attract merely those who happen to pass their way. Your salesmen can wait on only those who find their way within your store. An advertisement in your weekly paper reaches out to nearly all the homes in your city, and to nearly all the farms and ranches for miles around. It is read by the husband, the wife, the children, the hired help and others. If it were not for the newspapers you would have to do a great deal of soliciting to attract your trade. But that the paper does for all business men. It keeps up its circulation for your benefit. By inserting in your advertisement, the message you wish taken to nearly all the homes in your territory is promptly delivered, and if placed in the right kind of paper will be attractively presented, and will receive a good hearing for it will be in desirable company.
