Football More Popular and Better Understood

The baseball season is now at its close, and especially among the college centers, football will occupy the attention of the athletes and their admirers until Thanksgiving or a little after. Among the general public football has never been as popular as baseball, probably because it is played at a more disagreeable season of the year and because the public have never become familiar with it.

From a spectacular standpoint, the American game of football under the present rules undoubtedly has the edge on any other sport. No other game is so liable to spring sudden surprises, no other game is so full of intense moments than a closely fought game of football.

From a players standpoint football is undoubtedly the best all round developer of any sport. Not only physical but mental. More so than in any other game is quick thinking under fire and an ever alert and cool brain at a great premium. Then there is the team work in football which far surpasses that of any other game. While it is sometimes said a team wins by "stars" it is usually an eleven man machine acting together that produces the score. In football as in any other game there are few chances for underhanded advantage against opponents, but when officials and especially coaches take a determined stand against "dirty work" there is practically none of it done without punishment eliminated.

The object of the game is for one team to carry the ball across the opponents goal line and to defend its own goal line. When ever a ball is stopped or goes out the field of play it is called a dead ball and the teams line up against one another, the team in possession of the ball when declared dead again starts the play. If a team fails to advance the ball ten yards in four downs, that is four successive trials the ball is given to the other team who endeavors to advance it toward the opposite end of the field. The game is becoming more popular as it is better understood.

COUNTY FAIR SOME CLASS

is expected to break loose at noon, when many tons of dynamite will be exploded by Col. Goethals.

Saturday, Hillsboro Day

As usual the last is not least, and Hillsboro Day will probably be the banner day of the Fair. Not only is a large delegation expected from the county seat, but the races and parade of premium stock, etc., will guarantee the day's program to be as good as any of all the good days.

Pacific University Will Be There

On Friday Pacific University will close its doors and attend the Fair. This was decided by the faculty this week.

All Up to the Weather Man

All the weather men from Jupiter Pluvius and the Chief of the U. S. Weather Bureau to the local observers and sages, have been notified to manipulate the signs and produce fair weather for all three days. Every detail was ready and set last evening, and with the word go this morning the Washington County Fair for 1913 was off like a true winner for a three days' race, with each day a heat, and each heat a win.

New Registration Law

The new State law on registration with which all persons must comply before they can vote at the special referendum election of November 4, is not well understood by a large percentage of the Oregon voters. Women especially are unused to the ways of man made political laws, and women will get their first chance to vote on State measures on November 4. Here is the how and where and when of registration under the new law:

Where—The office of the County Clerk of each voter's county. When—Any time before October 20. The "how" is not complicated at all. At the office of the County Clerk the would-be voter is asked the color of eyes, shade of hair, length of residence in the State, and one or two other points. These are made part of a permanent record. The citizen signs this record in several places and a copy of it is sent to him, and this copy constitutes a permanent certificate of registration. The voter will not thereafter have to register unless the place of residence is changed.

At this special referendum election on November 4, five State measures will be up for action. A bill appropriating $100,000 for a new administration and class room building for the University of Oregon; a bill appropriating $75,000 for repairs and additions to four other buildings at the University of Oregon; the sterilization act; the county attorney act; the workmen's compensation act.
